DAVID GRAU

Incompatibility.
That is the way David Grau of Berrien Springs spelled the word last month during the Berrien county Cloverleaf spelling contest at Lakeshore junior high school, and according to any dictionary he was correct. But on lists used for the contest the word was spelled "incompatibility" and David was eliminated from competition for a trip to the national spelling bee in Washington, D.C.

"It's really too bad for the boy's sake, but it's a human error and those things happen," said Willis Koonitz, principal at Upton junior high in St. Joseph and one of two judges for the Cloverleaf finals. "It's unfortunate his coach didn't challenge the decision at the time. Once the contest is over, it's too late to do anything about it."

Ironically, David's spelling coach, Mrs. Donna Ziegler, was out of the room at the time he spelled the fatal word. Roy Rennhack, principal at the Berrien Springs middle school attended by David, explained that a substitute for Mrs. Ziegler had been hired for only half a day and that when he realized the contest would run longer than expected he told her to call the school to notify the substitute teacher.

He said that she was absent from the spelling competition for just a few minutes, but that during her absence

David was eliminated. "He did not challenge it...there was no challenge whatsoever," Rennhack said, "and he did not voice his concern to his coach when she came back."

The mistake was confirmed two days later when tape recordings made during the contest showed that David did, indeed, spell the word as it appears in the dictionary and a letter of apology was issued by Donald Spitzer, principal at Cujoma middle school and chairman of the 1976 Cloverleaf contest.

The word was part of a special "dynamite" list used in the competition after regular spelling lists were exhausted. Koonitz said words for the dynamite list were submitted by coaches of the 18 schools involved in the county-wide contest — 25 words from each school — and compiled by Spitzer.

He said the only people given copies of the dynamite list during the contest were the pronouncer, Mrs. Charlotte Wenham of Upton; and the two judges — himself and John Cooper, principal at Hull Junior high in Benton Harbor. Of these three, he said, only the pronouncer had seen the list before the day of the contest.

David, an eighth grader like all others in the contest, was described by Rennhack as "an excellent student...a very tractable, quiet young man." At this point, there's nothing that can be done," said Rennhack, a former varsity basketball coach at Paw Paw and Centerville high schools.

"I can't blame anyone except the student and myself — myself for sending his coach out of the room, although I'm not sure she would have caught the mistake...nobody else did. I've had nothing but good feelings about that spelling competition. It's better than a basketball game."

David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius J. Grau, Pokagon road.

Ask Berrien To Establish 4th Circuit Judgeship

By SCOTT WILLIAMSON
Staff Writer

Presiding Berrien Circuit Court Judge Julian E. Hughes this morning was scheduled to ask the county board of commissioners to establish a fourth circuit judgeship in Berrien county. Hughes told the Herald-Palladium he intended to present statistics that show Berrien's circuit court needs an additional judge "to handle an ever-increasing caseload."

Resolutions supporting the addition of another judge have already been passed by the Berrien County Courts Advisory Council and the executive and judiciary committees of the county bar association.

Creation of an extra judgeship requires the approval of the county board, the state legislature, and the state courts administrator.

Commissioner Otto Grau, chairman of the county's administration committee, under whose jurisdiction county courts comes, confirmed that members of his committee and the finance committee have met with the circuit judges on the proposal.

But he said the concept of another circuit judge is still being studied and had no idea when the county board might act on the proposal. "I have no recommendation to make at this time whatsoever," Grau said.

Asked if he thought the county might approve a fourth judge, Grau responded: "I just don't know." Hughes said: "I have no idea," when asked the same question.

"Whatever the county board decides, we'll live with it," Hughes said in speaking for himself and Berrien's other circuit judges, Chester J. Byrns and William S. White.

"But if we can't get a fourth circuit judge, we'll definitely have to have visiting judges next year to help handle the caseload," Hughes noted. He said $8,000 has been set aside in the circuit court's tentative 1977 budget to pay for visiting judges.

The resolutions drafted by the advisory council and bar association ask that all the approvals needed from the county and state "be accomplished within a time frame permitting the election of a fourth circuit judge in the August 1978 primary election and the November 1978 general election."

"If we don't get another judge this year, the next regular opportunity would be the November, 1978, general election," Hughes noted.

The judge said the addition of another judge would cost the Body Organs Sold After Autopsies, Probers Say

DETROIT (AP) — The Wayne County medical examiner says he has stopped removing pituitary glands from corpses following disclosure the county morgue gave away or sold parts of bodies without consent of relatives.

Wayne County Organized Crime Task Force investigators said other body parts previously were involved, with proceeds from their sale or a "service fee" going to a nonprofit organization. Medical Examiner Dr. Werner Spitz reported the pituitary glands which went to a Baltimore research firm were the only organs currently involved.

Patrick J. Foley, task force investigator, said morgue records were seized Wednesday but a decision on whether to seek a criminal warrant would not be reached for some time.

Aside from questions raised about the propriety and legality of the removal and disposal of the organs, the use of the funds received also is involved. Spitz claimed absolutely no gain was realized from the operation, with all proceeds going to research crib death and dwarfing.

Spitz's attorney, Richard Subrinich, referring to the money received from the disposal of the organs, said his client thought:

"I am able to fund an extra pathologist without using county tax dollars and have a program which is researching the cause of death of thousands of infants before they are 1 year old."

"The idea he might be hurting the county never crossed his mind," the attorney said.

In adjacent Macomb County, where Spitz is contracted to perform 100 autopsies a year, County Health Examiner Dr. Leland Brown was told to make sure no body parts from persons who died in that sector were being given away or sold. There was no indication they had been.

Subrinich said he wanted to find out whether Spitz and the morgue, "which is a research and teaching institution, can conduct itself like other pathologists and other medical teaching institutions in this state or whether they want us to be unique and not do so."

The attorney, saying he was a

Chief Rodez Demands Retraction Of Mrs. Ford

Benton Harbor Police Chief Andrew Rodez has demanded a retraction from City Commissioner Helen Ford of charges she made that he was engaged "in what appeared to be a conspiracy to carry out the assassination of the mayor." Rodez, through Atty. Paul Taglia of St. Joseph, demands that Mayor Charles F. Joseph and four other "Clean Slate" commissioners publicly disavow the charges by Mrs. Ford or participate in the retraction.

The demand for retraction is contained in a letter from Taglia to Mrs. Ford. The letter calls Mrs. Ford's charges of March 2 "false, highly defamatory and totally outrageous."

Taglia cites Michigan Compiled Laws which mean that in a libel suit exemplary or punitive damages cannot be recovered unless an opportunity for a retraction is given the defendant before a suit is started.

The letter to Mrs. Ford, dated March 17, demands retraction within two weeks in the same news media which broadcast or reported Mrs. Ford's charges. The letter from Taglia states that Mrs. Ford made the charges originally on Feb. 28 at a meeting of the Ministerial Alliance in Benton Harbor, and there is a demand for retraction to the Ministerial Alliance.

Joseph, Commissioners Barbara Huchaby, Winston Minott, Alfred Williams and Charles Shepherd are named in the demand because the letter from Taglia says Mrs. Ford "chose to act as spokeswoman" for them.

Rodez' demand for retraction is the second in connection with Mrs. Ford's charges. A demand for retraction was issued Monday on behalf of Maurice Bishop, former City Commissioner Carl Brown and Morgan Hager, members of the recall committee.

Speed Of Economic Recovery Is Surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon says the economic recovery is better than anyone predicted and that inflation and unemployment may drop sooner than expected. There is a "fair chance" that unemployment will drop to below 7 per cent this year and also that inflation will decline to about 2 per cent within three years, Simon said Wednesday. It was the most optimistic outlook for the economy yet expressed by a top Ford administration official and came against a background of reports of steady improvements in almost all sectors of the economy.

"I don't know anyone who forecast the vigor of the economic recovery," Simon said. He said he was especially pleased with the "very positive development" of a record increase in new housing starts reported by the government Tuesday. "I think there is a fair chance that unemployment will be below 7 per cent at the end of this year," Simon told reporters. Last January, the administration officially estimated a jobless rate of between 7 per cent and 7.5 per cent by the end of the year. Simon said the underlying rate of inflation in the economy now is about 6 per cent, but he said he believes the annual rise in the cost of living can be reduced to 2 per cent in two to three years.

The nation's inflation rate has not been below 2 per cent since 1965, when price increases that year averaged 1.8 per cent. Prices rose 8.9 per cent last year, and the administration is forecasting a 5.9 per cent increase in 1978. Simon repeated his intention to step down as Treasury secretary at the end of this year. "I'm going home in December," he said. He volunteered to reporters there are "an awful lot of people suggesting" that he run for governor of New Jersey, his home state, in 1977, but he said, "I haven't made up my mind."

Simon also said he expects to make public a report "in a couple of weeks" on the Treasury Department's investigation into possible wrongdoing by Commissioner Donald C. Alexander of the Internal Revenue Service. There have been published allegations that Alexander blocked an IRS probe of the tax returns of Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M. He declined to indicate the findings of the probe but said he saw no reason to change his earlier statement that he had complete confidence in Alexander's integrity.

Birthday Bombshell For Jolly Old England

When Mayor Daley's Chicago machine pushes Mike Howlett by a substantial margin into the Democratic nomination for governor of Illinois over the incumbent, Dan Walker, and loses substantially in a similar effort to outst Ralph Metcalfe from the Congressional nomination, the average person does not need a Walter Cronkite to pontificate over the TV as to how come.

Very simply, Walker had lost the bloom on his rose at least a year before the Illinois voters went to the polls this week.

In contrast, Metcalfe had been electioneering for Congress too long, 25 years worth, to be unseated by the relatively faceless unknown bureaucrat thrown at him by the Daley organization.

Had His Honor put forward any less a personality than the outgoing Howlett, Governor Dan would not now be pondering which fork in the road he should take.

Harold Wilson's surprise announcement on Monday to step down as England's prime minister is something else.

It has the British, whatever their political leaning, wondering what may come next. The market on foreign currencies reacted immediately by sending the sorely pressed English pound to new lows. Even the unflappable, redoubtable Cronkite has yet to offer a clue as to what it is, all about.

Wilson, first elected to Parliament in 1945, has been the Labor party's acknowledged leader for the past 13 years and is in a second stint as his country's highest officer. Under the British electoral system he and his party would not have to stand for election again until 1979 unless Wilson might lose on a vote of confidence in Parliament.

Though Labor holds only a bare majority of one seat in the House of Commons, its working majority is at least 40 votes because of partisan division within the minority.

The Prime Minister gave as the only reason for bowing out the fact of reaching his 60th birthday a few days ago. He promised himself, he informed the press, he would drop any leadership mantle he might be wearing when that day rolled around. In the same announcement, he declared his intention to remain a back bench member in the Commons and to run for the Parliamentary seat for as long as his constituency will have him.

A number of Conservative party leaders have expressed concurrence with the birthday statement. This is the reason he gave to the Queen, they say, and if Elizabeth accepted the resignation thinking other reasons might be motivating Wilson, then the crown would be in the unthinkable position of participating in a lie.

Whether the reporters listening to that Old School Tie explanation gave thought to the fact that more than one Prime Minister has kept back an ace on His or Her Royal Highness is not known.

From over the Atlantic comes a wave length that Wilson may feel he is at rope's end in the juggling act which has been forced upon the Whitehall government, during and before his second term as Prime Minister.

Last week he successfully beat back a revolt within his own party on some anti-inflationary measures bearing down severely on wage increases. A group of 37 radical Labor members accused him of dictatorially selling out on his party's principles. Only the Conservatives' failure to exploit that dissidence held off a test on a vote of confidence.

Another splinter developing within the Labor party is its Scottish members who are showing more interest in a separatist position for Scotland than they are in the party's economic platform.

Quite probably the Irish inflammation, Britain's version of Viet Nam, weighs heavily upon Wilson. Though most of his countrymen probably would prefer to see Ireland float away by herself, a Whitehall withdrawal from the island's six northern counties would be admitting to the world that Old John Bull really is careworn.

More importantly, however, may be Wilson's recognition that England can not regain economic stability without scuttling virtually all Labor party tenets. Basically, it means Britishers will have to work, if not for less money, then more diligently and efficiently for what they are being paid.

He has come close to stating this belief publicly, as the ultra liberal protest clearly demonstrated. While able to fend off that semi-Soviet militancy, the probability to convince the less intransigent majority of his followers is questionable.

Faced by uncomfortable realities of the foregoing dimension, the urge to have somebody else take charge becomes strong.

Taking it easy is an ever present urge for most people, a feeling to which even Prime Ministers are not immune.

We suspect, however, Wilson's contemplation of what his countrymen must do to pull England up from her knees hastened the retirement desire.

Situation Invites Intrigue

Cuba, the festering sore of the Caribbean which has possibly exported more guerrillas and other troops in comparison to its total strength to stir up trouble in other lands than any other country, has zeroed in on the continent of Africa. Angolan Marxists, backed by 12,000 Cuban troops, were the most obvious recipients of Cuban assistance so far, but Cuban military forces are in at least a half dozen Arab and African countries.

For the United States, one of the worst aspects of Cuban interventionism is knowing what Havana is up to but being able to do little about it. Sec. of State Kissinger has warned Cuba not to pull any more Angolas, but both Washington and Havana know the warning has little substance behind it.

The disillusionment is overseas actions following Vietnam remains too strong for the United States to intervene militarily, even if it wished to take action. But in Africa, the U.S. also faces hostility or at best suspicion from a large number of third world countries, some of which at the same time disapproved of Cuba's presence in Angola.

It is a situation which invites further Cuban intrigue.

Wants Penetrator Backers To Spell Out Their Reasons

Editor,

Soon the voters in St. Joseph city and township will get the chance to cast an "advisory vote" on the Penetrator from 1-94 to Washington and Hilltop roads. That vote will probably draw an overwhelming NO vote, because the proponents have remained aloof and silent on their reasons for their support.

Obviously, this over-ten-year-old plan has merits, for it has the support of the city commission, the planning commission, the State Highway department, and other groups. Their failure to give the public a clear explanation for their support creates great doubt in many minds.

Some may think this is a political deal to benefit a few at the expense of all the taxpayers; or that it is a first step in a larger, potentially unpopular traffic plan, which would be easier to accept, once this start has been made. Others may feel that the construction will bring increased expenditure for food, housing, etc., and as long as the State is bent on spending the money, why object to having it spent here? Or there might be suspicion that the news media had suppressed any arguments in favor of the Penetrator, because of conflict with their editorial positions.

All such thoughts can be readily erased by a clear presentation of the arguments the proponents can bring to bear.

Now is the time for local proponents to spell out clearly what reasons make them favor the Penetrator, before the advisory ballots are cast. Then the voters can act with intelligence, rather than with emotion.

Editor,

As I sat through Monday night's meeting of the Benton Harbor city commission I noticed an amazing likeness of it to the movie, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Mayor Joseph played the part of the head nurse and throughout the meeting imposed his will on everyone else and insulted everyone with the nerve to oppose him. The "Clean Site" commissioners were cast in the intern and orderly positions, being very sure to reinforce the mayor/head nurse and making sure things went as he wanted them to. Commissioners Yarbrough, Bolin and Eamon played the parts of McMurphy and the other hospital patients — Commissioner Yarbrough probably being McMurphy.

As the meeting ended, it was very apparent that if anyone, including the public, objected to any move of the mayor, a "political lobotomy" was to be performed on him.

The complete breakdown of the democratic process is ruling Benton Harbor and the city will fall just as the Roman Empire did. I think the citizens of this city deserve more from their elected officials than they are getting from the mayor's team of "yes" men. By now they must all have poor self-images of themselves.

My support and sympathy goes to Commissioners Bolin, Eamon and Yarbrough, with the hope that Benton Harbor will lift itself and prosper again.

Barlow's Laundry and Cleaners intends to redevelop the entire block in which the cleaning firm is presently located in St. Joseph, according to C. Thomas Daley, St. Joseph urban renewal director. Daley described Barlow's plans at a meeting of the St. Joseph Lions club in the Wilcomb hotel yesterday. He said Barlow's is negotiating with a top grade supermarket chain as the core to a series of services which will include a coin laundry and dry cleaning unit in the block bounded by Main, Ship, Court and Port streets.

Reconstruction of the highway bridge between St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, at the Central docks, will start within a few weeks, Mayor L.A. King informed members of the St. Joseph city council last night.

Several 32 foot gasoline launches to be used in the Sesqui-centennial Exposition which opens in Philadelphia in May will be constructed by the Truscott-Pierce company of St. Joseph which has leased part of the former Gurinlan Candy company buildings in St. Joseph. They will be open boats with canopies, seating 40 persons, for sight seers who wish to view the exposition from the lagoon. The boats will be slightly smaller than 40 similar crafts built by the St. Joseph company for the World's Fair at St. Louis in 1904.

Small Firms Have Problem

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — There is no question that bribing foreign officials to secure business favors is wrong.

But consider the problem of the small firm which refuses to engage in this practice, so common in many countries I have lived or toured. What happens when the small company, as a result of its refusal, loses more of its investment than it can afford?

According to excerpts from the testimony before a congressional committee of Dr. William R. Carden, an official of one such modest company, which has apparently lost its $3 million investment while being praised by the foreign host government for its development work.

"By mid-April we felt that a new contract would soon be signed. But early on the morning of April 15, I was telephoned by a (company) employee and asked to stop at his house. When I arrived, I found the employee quite frightened. I was told that he was instructed to get me to his house and wait for further instruction. A telephone call summoned us in separate cars to the square in Port-au-Prince, a Port-au-Prince suburb. Sitting there in my car, I was joined by a ... man ...

"Speaking English, he refused to tell me his name ... He purported to be a member of the government and promised me a contract would be forthcoming unless (my company) did the following: 1. Hire our (local) attorney who was well-known ... for his refusal to make payoffs, and hire a Mr. ... (who later turned out to be an employee of the Department of Justice), 2.

Deposit $500,000 in the National Bank and 3. Give yet-to-be-named third parties one-half of the stock in ... (my company).

"Unless the demands were agreed to, the project would be shifted from department to department until (my company) would finally give up and leave Haiti ...

Six months later, Carden was telephoned, told the contract would be signed if his company would agree on two points. The company did, in fact, agree. "However, upon arrival in Haiti," Carden continued, "I was presented with an under-the-table demand of $50,000. When I refused, no further discussions took place ...

"Thus a project that began with such great hopes ... four years and approximately three million dollars earlier ended with a whimper and not a bang ...

Nearly a million dollars had been paid for the leasehold development rights to 4,800 acres. Down the drain. The company was denied access to the equipment and were forced to leave it in the country. "For three years we have watched the elements destroy the work we did on the island and turn nearly half a million dollars of equipment and supplies into rusted wrecks ...

The Ford administration is now proposing a code of ethics to be agreed to by countries worldwide.

More effective would be agreement among major industrial nations to enforce regulations on bribery and require strict auditing procedures by private accountants to back the regulations.

Fred Harris Will Disappear

Fred Harris will certainly disappear soon from the political scene. His presidential bid got nowhere in New Hampshire and then sank without a trace at 7.7 per cent in Massachusetts. Florida? He didn't even campaign seriously there.

Nevertheless, his candidacy is worth a quick look as a political and cultural curiosity.

Harris comes on as the "people's candidate," yet in Massachusetts — as in New Hampshire — what vote Harris did manage to attract came from academic enclaves and wealthy suburbs.

The "people's candidate"? Well, Harris did campaign all over the country last summer in a camper. I observed the Harris operation, for example, in the northern New Hampshire paper-mill town of Berlin, a bleak non-sense kind of a place way up in the White Mountains.

To get the local citizenry into the spirit of things, the Harris people produced a country combo which featured the Woody Guthrie sentimental - populist tune, "This Land Is Your Land." This made no impression at all, so far as I could see, on the laconic citizenry of Berlin.

The next play of the Harris campaign was to distribute a 99-cent ham-and-bean supper, organizing the local people into a Depression-style soup line. The place began to resemble a movie set for a Steinbeck novel. But stylistically it was all wrong. The mill workers of Berlin aren't starving. They don't need soup-line handouts.

Then the candidate himself, besely, evangelical: "The people who have to work in this country are entitled to have someone speak for them. ...

The issue is privilege." But does Harris speak for "the people who have to work?"

The Harris style is populist, or pseudo-populist, but the Harris positions are straight upper-middle-class radical chic. He supports busing. He would declare amnesty for Vietnam draft dodgers. He favors "affirmative action" quotas in hiring and in education. He is for day-care centers. He is for abortion, and for gay rights legislation. Some populist. Those positions would get you into a fist fight in any working-class bar in Manchester, New Hampshire, or Springfield, Mass. Fred Harris is about as populist as Shirley MacLaine.

Do the affluent types living in $100,000 homes out in suburbia and voting for Fred Harris really believe in that rhetoric about squeezing the rich for the benefit of the common man?

Is "this land," out here in Amherst and Greenfield, really "your land," too, you nice ethnic common men in Springfield and South Boston? Not very likely. If you think it is, maybe you saw Joe Hill last night, too.

As the voters instantly discerned, Fred Harris is not a serious protest or populist candidate. The Massachusetts voters who are really fed up with the status quo voted for George Wallace.

Fred Harris is selling a consumer product. He provides stylistic thrills for parlor populists earning upwards of $50,000 per year. You bring the champagne, Fred, baby, I'll bring the leshian.

Birthday Bombshell For Jolly Old England

When Mayor Daley's Chicago machine pushes Mike Howlett by a substantial margin into the Democratic nomination for governor of Illinois over the incumbent, Dan Walker, and loses substantially in a similar effort to outst Ralph Metcalfe from the Congressional nomination, the average person does not need a Walter Cronkite to pontificate over the TV as to how come.

Very simply, Walker had lost the bloom on his rose at least a year before the Illinois voters went to the polls this week.

In contrast, Metcalfe had been electioneering for Congress too long, 25 years worth, to be unseated by the relatively faceless unknown bureaucrat thrown at him by the Daley organization.

Had His Honor put forward any less a personality than the outgoing Howlett, Governor Dan would not now be pondering which fork in the road he should take.

Harold Wilson's surprise announcement on Monday to step down as England's prime minister is something else.

It has the British, whatever their political leaning, wondering what may come next. The market on foreign currencies reacted immediately by sending the sorely pressed English pound to new lows. Even the unflappable, redoubtable Cronkite has yet to offer a clue as to what it is, all about.

Wilson, first elected to Parliament in 1945, has been the Labor party's acknowledged leader for the past 13 years and is in a second stint as his country's highest officer. Under the British electoral system he and his party would not have to stand for election again until 1979 unless Wilson might lose on a vote of confidence in Parliament.

Though Labor holds only a bare majority of one seat in the House of Commons, its working majority is at least 40 votes because of partisan division within the minority.

The Prime Minister gave as the only reason for bowing out the fact of reaching his 60th birthday a few days ago. He promised himself, he informed the press, he would drop any leadership mantle he might be wearing when that day rolled around. In the same announcement, he declared his intention to remain a back bench member in the Commons and to run for the Parliamentary seat for as long as his constituency will have him.

A number of Conservative party leaders have expressed concurrence with the birthday statement. This is the reason he gave to the Queen, they say, and if Elizabeth accepted the resignation thinking other reasons might be motivating Wilson, then the crown would be in the unthinkable position of participating in a lie.

Whether the reporters listening to that Old School Tie explanation gave thought to the fact that more than one Prime Minister has kept back an ace on His or Her Royal Highness is not known.

From over the Atlantic comes a wave length that Wilson may feel he is at rope's end in the juggling act which has been forced upon the Whitehall government, during and before his second term as Prime Minister.

Last week he successfully beat back a revolt within his own party on some anti-inflationary measures bearing down severely on wage increases. A group of 37 radical Labor members accused him of dictatorially selling out on his party's principles. Only the Conservatives' failure to exploit that dissidence held off a test on a vote of confidence.

Another splinter developing within the Labor party is its Scottish members who are showing more interest in a separatist position for Scotland than they are in the party's economic platform.

Quite probably the Irish inflammation, Britain's version of Viet Nam, weighs heavily upon Wilson. Though most of his countrymen probably would prefer to see Ireland float away by herself, a Whitehall withdrawal from the island's six northern counties would be admitting to the world that Old John Bull really is careworn.

More importantly, however, may be Wilson's recognition that England can not regain economic stability without scuttling virtually all Labor party tenets. Basically, it means Britishers will have to work, if not for less money, then more diligently and efficiently for what they are being paid.

He has come close to stating this belief publicly, as the ultra liberal protest clearly demonstrated. While able to fend off that semi-Soviet militancy, the probability to convince the less intransigent majority of his followers is questionable.

Faced by uncomfortable realities of the foregoing dimension, the urge to have somebody else take charge becomes strong.

Taking it easy is an ever present urge for most people, a feeling to which even Prime Ministers are not immune.

We suspect, however, Wilson's contemplation of what his countrymen must do to pull England up from her knees hastened the retirement desire.

Situation Invites Intrigue

Cuba, the festering sore of the Caribbean which has possibly exported more guerrillas and other troops in comparison to its total strength to stir up trouble in other lands than any other country, has zeroed in on the continent of Africa. Angolan Marxists, backed by 12,000 Cuban troops, were the most obvious recipients of Cuban assistance so far, but Cuban military forces are in at least a half dozen Arab and African countries.

For the United States, one of the worst aspects of Cuban interventionism is knowing what Havana is up to but being able to do little about it. Sec. of State Kissinger has warned Cuba not to pull any more Angolas, but both Washington and Havana know the warning has little substance behind it.

The disillusionment is overseas actions following Vietnam remains too strong for the United States to intervene militarily, even if it wished to take action. But in Africa, the U.S. also faces hostility or at best suspicion from a large number of third world countries, some of which at the same time disapproved of Cuba's presence in Angola.

It is a situation which invites further Cuban intrigue.

Editor.

Soon the voters in St. Joseph city and township will get the chance to cast an "advisory vote" on the Penetrator from I-94 to Washington and Hilltop roads. That vote will probably draw an overwhelming NO vote, because the proponents have remained aloof and silent on their reasons for their support.

Obviously, this over-ten-year-old plan has merits, for it has the support of the city commission, the planning commission, the State Highway department, and other groups. Their failure to give the public a clear explanation for their support creates great doubt in many minds.

Some may think this is a political deal to benefit a few at the expense of all the taxpayers; or that it is a first step in a larger, potentially unpopular traffic plan, which would be easier to accept, once this start has been made. Others may feel that the construction will bring increased expenditure for food, housing, etc., and as long as the State is bent on spending the money, why object to having it spent here? Or there might be suspicion that the news media had suppressed any arguments in favor of the Penetrator, because of conflict with their editorial positions.

All such thoughts can be readily erased by a clear presentation of the arguments the proponents can bring to bear.

LMC Opens Five-Day Bicentennial Festival

Lake Michigan College opened its five-day Bicentennial festival Wednesday night with the first production, "Freedom's Children," a revue of 18th century American music.

The musical production will be repeated at 11 a.m. Friday and 8 p.m. Saturday in the blue lecture hall on LMC's Napier avenue campus.

Other activities during the college's Bicentennial celebration that runs through Sunday range from Indian dancing and gospel music to a jazz band concert.

"Freedom's Children" was inspired by the Country Dancers of Berea college, Berea, Ky. Music from the British Isles and Colonial America was sung with the backdrop scene from the early settlement days.

Included in the range of music were ballads, madrigals, spirituals, play-party songs, work songs and musical games. Some of the songs were: "Turn the Glasses Over," an old English dance; "Now is the Month of Maying," and "Pick a Bale of Cotton."

Soloists included Penny Jones, Luis Davenport, Jill Warner and Mike Alexander. Children featured in many scenes included Nicky Jones, son of Atty. and Mrs. F.A. Jones of St. Joseph; David Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Johnson, of St. Joseph; and Jeff Shumaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shumaker of Benton Harbor.

The production is the work of the LMC concert choir and the LMC Madrigal Singers.

It was conceived by Jean Burtz, LMC choral director; and Esther Shumaker, chorus accompanist; and directed by Lee Maikel, St. Joseph interior decorator and Twin City Players director; and Carolyn Beck, LMC drama instructor.

The five-day college Bicentennial resumes at 8 p.m. tonight with the Van Buren Folk dancers performing in the student center.

Saturday features a Jazz band concert at 7 p.m. in the blue lecture hall; "Freedom's Children," at 8 p.m.; Pottawatomie Indians at 8 p.m. in the student center and Gospel Sounds Unlimited at 9 p.m. in the blue lecture hall.

Sunday's agenda includes an arts and crafts show from 1 to 5 p.m. in the student center; the Camp Madrin dancers at 1 and 3 p.m. in the gymnasium and the jazz presentation of Barbershop, Blues, Jazz and Western and spiritual songs at 1:30 and 3:30 in the blue lecture hall.

A round table discussion on "Freedom of the Press," moderated by Berrien Fifth District court Judge Ronald Taylor will be held at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in the library with news media representatives participating.

The Lake Michigan college board of trustees has a vacant seat to fill and "definitely is looking for someone from the south end of the county who is connected with industry," said Dr. Bernard Radde, board chairman.

The board vacancy was created last month by the resignation of Donald Eppelheimer who like four incumbent board members has a St. Joseph address. One trustee has a Benton Harbor address, and Mrs. Emily Foster of Niles is the only board member from South Berrien county.

The agenda for next Monday's LMC board meeting calls for discussion on the appointment to fill the vacancy. Radde said the board hopes to contact several people under consideration for appointment before the board meets.

The appointee would have to stand for election in November to fill out the balance of Eppelheimer's term that ends in 1980.

By occupation board members are: Radde, a dentist; Earl Pince, retired St. Joseph school superintendent; Richard Gates, vice president of Ned Gates Chevrolet; Victor Wier, Columbia high school principal; Mrs. Foster, a counselor in the Niles school system; and James Nettleton, a Whirlpool patent attorney.

Also on Monday's agenda for the 7:30 p.m. meeting at LMC are adoption of a tentative operating budget and setting tuition rates for 1976-77.

AREA POLICE ROUNDUP

Churchgoers Frighten Thief Off

Members of a Benton township church congregation apparently frightened off a thief Wednesday after two cars were broken into in the church parking lot, state police of the Benton Harbor post said.

Rev. Rudolph Thomas of the Church of God and Christ, 135 Walnut avenue, told troopers members were alerted by the honking of a car horn about 10:30 p.m. A young man ran from a car and escaped by jumping over a fence. Rev. Thomas said a tape player from the car of Patricia Halliburton, 724 McAllister avenue, Benton Harbor, was apparently dropped by the thief, but a calculator from the car of Ronald Wooden, 1159 McIntosh drive, Benton Heights, was reported stolen.

Two men and a woman were arrested by Benton township police early today after an argument in a parking lot in the 800 block of East Main street during which a pistol was allegedly fired. No one was injured, police said.

Booked at the Berrien county jail were James Garfield Johnson, Jr., 25, of 560 Warwick terrace, Benton Harbor, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon; JoAnn Reese, 21, of 1759 Crystal court, Benton township, on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon; and Jesse Lee Vaughn, 22, of 396 Ohio street, Benton Harbor, on a charge of drunk and disorderly.

A Sodus township man told Berrien sheriff's officers Wednesday that he recovered a tool box that had been stolen from his car.

Richard Smith, Box 79, Townline road, told officers he saw three men carrying the box. They dropped the box and fled as Smith approached.

Smith said he noticed the box and other items missing from his car at 9:15 a.m. Wednesday. He saw the trio carrying the box about an hour later near the intersection of Pipestone and Townline roads. Still missing were a tape player, 10 tapes and a camera. The theft occurred while the car was parked at Smith's home, officers said.

Another theft reported to sheriff's officers involved a television and two small rugs, valued at $200, from a room at the North Shore motel, 3149 US-43, Hagar township.

Thefts investigated Wednesday by Benton Harbor police were:

—A portable television and record player, valued at $389, and $10 in change, from the apartment of Robin Franklin, 124 East May street.

—A .32 caliber automatic pistol, valued at $75, from the home of Milton Baird, 1142 Pearl street.

A car and pickup truck were reported stolen to Berrien sheriff's deputies and Benton Harbor police Wednesday. The pickup truck was recovered by city police a short distance from where it was taken.

James Caldwell, 157 North McCord street, Benton Harbor, said he parked his pickup in the 300 block of Territorial road. A witness told Benton Harbor police he saw two boys drive the truck away shortly before 9 p.m. Sgt. Cyril Fuller reported he found the truck in an alley between Miller and Rifford

Two Men Arrested At Inspection Lane

A state police vehicle inspection lane in Stevensville resulted in the arrest of two men on charges of carrying a concealed weapon, according to Stevensville Police Chief Richard Beck who made the arrests.

Beck said he was assisting troopers with the inspections Wednesday when a pickup truck was stopped. Confiscated were a sawed-off shotgun, ski mask and two citizens' band radios.

The inspection lane was in the 5500 block of St. Joseph avenue. Booked at Berrien county jail were Steven C. McCall, 24, Deerfield, Mich., and Andrew C. Jones, 27, Detroit.

AIDED BY WHIRLPOOL FOUNDATION: Construction of the new Joseph C. Shouvin Center for Lifelong Learning on the campus of Wittenberg university, Springfield, O., is to start this spring. The Whirlpool Corporation Foundation of Benton Harbor is one of number of industrial groups that have contributed funds for the structure, seen here as architect's sketch. The center will be new home for community and management education programs offered for many years at Wittenberg. Whirlpool Corp. has sent some 176 employees from its Clyde and Marion, O., Evansville, Ind., and St. Joseph plants to short course programs offered at Wittenberg. The building project will cost $1,568,297.

Man Fails To Clean Yard; Fined

A Benton township man pleaded guilty Wednesday in Berrien Fifth District court to a charge of failing to clean up the area around his house in violation of a township ordinance.

Sentenced to fine and costs of $40 was Richard Cantrell of 1390 Rackliffe drive, Benton township. He was ticketed by the township building inspector March 8.

Zollar Seeks To Extend Farm Price Bargaining Act

LANSING — State Sen. Charles Zollar has introduced a bill that would make permanent the much-debated Michigan Agricultural Marketing and Bargaining Act, scheduled to expire in September.

On March 2 Zollar, a Benton township Republican, and 18 co-sponsors quietly introduced the bill in the senate. It would only cancel that part of the Act which established an automatic five-year expiration date, according to Mick Middaugh, Zollar's administrative assistant. Purpose of the expiration clause was to give the act a set time in which to prove itself.

The Act, introduced by Sens. Zollar and William S. Ballenger, of Ovid, in 1972, set up machinery to solve price disputes between growers and processors by binding arbitration. The Act, once passed and implemented, was the subject of several lawsuits. Its constitutionality is currently being challenged by processors in a lawsuit that is in the Michigan Supreme court.

"The senator feels that where it (the Act) has been used it has been successful," Middaugh said yesterday. Noting that the original bill was passed after much controversy, Middaugh acknowledged that a debate on the Act's merits could take place before this session.

Zollar chose not to wait for the Supreme court to rule on the Act, Middaugh said. If the court rules the act constitutional near the time of expiration "we might get caught short."

The bill has been read on the senate floor and has been referred to the Senate Committee on Agricultural and Consumer Affairs. If it passes the senate, it will go through the same process in the house of representatives.

Under the Act all growers of a set size who produce the same crop can vote to be represented during bargaining by an association. Using the Act this year will be larger growers of kraut cabbage, asparagus and apples.

PRICES DECLINE
CHICAGO (AP) — The prices of gasoline, home heating oil, heavy industrial fuel and most other petroleum products have declined in March as a result of the federal omnibus energy bill which took effect Feb. 1, according to oil industry analyst Herbert Hugo.

LMC Opens Five-Day Bicentennial Festival

Lake Michigan College opened its five-day Bicentennial festival Wednesday night with the first production of "Freedom's Children," a revue of 18th century American music.

The musical production will be repeated at 11 a.m. Friday and 8 p.m. Saturday in the blue lecture hall on LMC's Napier avenue campus.

Other activities during the college's Bicentennial celebration that runs through Sunday range from Indian dancing and gospel music to a jazz band concert.

"Freedom's Children" was inspired by the Country Dancers of Berea college, Berea, Ky. Music from the British Isles and Colonial America was sung with the backdrop scene from the early settlement days.

Included in the range of music were ballads, madrigals, spirituals, play-party songs, work songs and musical games. Some of the songs were: "Turn the Glasses Over," an old English dance; "Now is the Month of Maying," and "Pick a Bale of Cotton."

Soloists included Penny Jones, Lois Davenport, Jill Warner and Mike Alexander. Children featured in many scenes included Nicky Jones, son of Atty. and Mrs. F.A. Jones of St. Joseph; David Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Johnson, of St. Joseph; and Jeff Shoemaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shoemaker of Benton Harbor.

The production is the work of the LMC concert choir and the LMC Madrigal Singers.

It was conceived by Hean Bartz, LMC choral director; and Esther Shoemaker, chorus accompanist; and directed by Lee Maikel, St. Joseph interior decorator and Twin City Players director; and Carolyn Beck, LMC drama instructor.

The five-day college Bicentennial resumes at 8 p.m. tonight with the Van Buren Folk dancers performing in the student center.

Saturday features a Jazz band concert at 7 p.m. in the blue lecture hall; "Freedom's Children," at 8 p.m.; Pottawatomie Indians at 8 p.m. in the student center and Gospel Sounds Unlimited at 9 p.m. in the blue lecture hall.

Sunday's agenda includes an arts and crafts show from 1 to 5 p.m. in the student center; the Camp Madron dancers at 1 and 3 p.m. in the gymnasium and the jazz presentation of Barbershop, Blues, Jazz and Western and spiritual songs at 1:30 and 3:30 in the blue lecture hall.

A round table discussion on "Freedom of the Press" moderated by Berrien Fifth District court Judge Ronald Taylor will be held at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in the library with news media representatives participating.

AREA POLICE ROUNDUP

Churchgoers Frighten Thief Off

Members of a Benton township church congregation apparently frightened off a thief Wednesday after two cars were broken into in the church parking lot, state police of the Benton Harbor post said.

Rev. Rudolph Thomas of the Church of God and Christ, 135 Walnut avenue, told troopers members were alerted by the honking of a car horn about 10:30 p.m. A young man ran from a car and escaped by jumping over a fence. Rev. Thomas said a tape player from the car of Patricia Halliburton, 724 McAllister avenue, Benton Harbor, was apparently dropped by the thief, but a calculator from the car of Ronald Wooden, 1159 McIntosh drive, Benton Heights, was reported stolen.

Two men and a woman were arrested by Benton township police early today after an argument in a parking lot in the 900 block of East Main street during which a pistol was allegedly fired. No one was injured, police said.

Booked at the Berrien county jail were James Garfield Johnson, Jr., 25, of 560 Warwick terrace, Benton Harbor, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon; JoAnn Reese, 21, of 1759 Crystal court, Benton township, on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon; and Jesse Lee Vaughn, 22, of 396 Ohio street, Benton Harbor, on a charge of drunk and disorderly.

A Sodus township man told Berrien sheriff's officers Wednesday that he recovered a tool box that had been stolen from his car.

Richard Smith, Box 79, Townline road, told officers he saw three men carrying the box. They dropped the box and fled as Smith approached.

Smith said he noticed the box and other items missing from his car at 9:15 a.m. Wednesday. He saw the trio carrying the box about an hour later near the intersection of Pipestone and Townline roads. Still missing were a tape player, 10 tapes and a camera. The theft occurred while the car was parked at Smith's home, officers said.

Another theft reported to sheriff's officers involved a television and two small rugs, valued at $200, from a room at the North Shore motel, 3149 US-33, Hagar township.

Thefts investigated Wednesday by Benton Harbor police were:

—A portable television and record player, valued at $389, and $10 in change, from the apartment of Robin Franklin, 124 East May street.

—A .32 caliber automatic pistol, valued at $75, from the home of Milton Baird, 1142 Pearl street.

Benton township police said Vicki Jackson, 1200 East Empire avenue, reported the theft of a record turntable, a radio and a suede coat, all valued at $200, from her mobile home.

LMC Board Looks South For Trustee Appointment

The Lake Michigan college board of trustees has a vacant seat to fill and "definitely is looking for someone from the south end of the county who is connected with industry," said Dr. Bernard Radde, board chairman.

The board vacancy was created last month by the resignation of Donald Eppelheimer who like four incumbent board members has a St. Joseph address. One trustee has a Benton Harbor address, and Mrs. Emily Foster of Niles is the only board member from South Berrien county.

The agenda for next Monday's LMC board meeting calls for discussion on the appointment to fill the vacancy. Radde said the board hopes to contact several people under consideration for appointment before the board meets.

The appointee would have to stand for election in November to fill out the balance of Eppelheimer's term that ends in 1980.

By occupation board members are: Radde, a dentist; Earl Place, retired St. Joseph school superintendent; Richard Gates, vice president of Ned Gates Chevrolet; Victor Wier, Coloma high school principal; Mrs. Foster, a counselor in the Niles school system; and James Nettleton, a Whirlpool patent attorney.

Also on Monday's agenda for the 7:30 p.m. meeting at LMC are adoption of a tentative operating budget and setting tuition rates for 1976-77.

Great Books Discussion Sessions Begin April 7

Wednesday, April 7, 15 to 20 men and women will sit down to discuss deeply, perhaps argue vehemently, "The Wild Duck" by Henrik Ibsen.

The place will be Maud Preston Palenske Memorial library and the time 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The requirement will be to have read and thought about the "The Wild Duck."

The meeting will be the beginning of a new year of monthly Great Books discussion sessions. The participants in the discussion are men and women who find excitement in ideas and who meet not for grades or degrees, but to increase their understanding of themselves and the world around them by exploring the meaning of a great book.

The Great Books program in the twin cities was started in 1947, not long after Robert Hutchins, then president of the University of Chicago, and Mortimer Adler established the Great Books program.

First session locally was held in the YWCA Cove in St. Joseph. Frances Goodsell, then executive director of the "Y," had the idea and convinced Robert Stanton and John Paul Taylor to be the first co-moderators of the discussions. At the present time the discussion group rotates its leadership with a different leader each session.

With some brief intermissions, the program has continued during the winter months.

For the past 10 years, Mrs. Joseph Hartwig has been the organizer of the group while currently that responsibility has been given to Mrs. Bouton Sowers, 8830 Turner road, Lakeside, Mich., 49116.

Some of the books or excerpts from them that will be discussed locally beginning April 7 include "The Canterbury Tales," Chaucer; "The Inferno," Dante; "Time and Free Will," Bergson; "Faust," Goethe; "Symposium," Plato; "The Decameron," Boccaccio; "The Book of Genesis," and "Fathers and Sons," Turgenev.

Anyone interested in joining the local Great Books discussion group, may contact Mrs. Sowers and also order a set of books by mailing a check for $12 for Set

Five, plus $1.25 for a copy of the Reader Aid, to the Great Books Foundation, 307 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., 60601.

Mrs. Sower recommends immediate action since it takes several weeks to get the books. She also notes that order blanks are available at the library in St. Joseph and a few sets of books are available for purchase there.

AMONG LEADERS: Atty. Michael Cook and Mrs. Earl (Shirley) Brohier are among leaders for the Great Books discussion sessions to begin Wednesday, April 7, at Maud Preston Palenske Memorial Library in St. Joseph. Anyone interested in joining the discussions is urged to register as soon as possible in order to secure the necessary books on time.

JUNIOR PROGRAM TOO: Lincoln elementary school in St. Joseph hosted a Junior Great Books training program for 28 mothers living in the St. Joseph, Lake Michigan Catholic, Trinity Lutheran, and Lakeshore school districts earlier this year. From left, Joseph C. Farah, associate training coordinator, Great Books Foundation, Chicago, Ill., instructs Mrs. Andrew (Anne) Takacs, Lake Michigan Catholic middle school; Mrs. Pieter (Carol) Geldhof, Trinity Lutheran; Mrs. David (Carol) Siewert, Roosevelt elementary, and Mrs. Edward (Connie) Donahue and Mrs. Jeffery (Evelyn) Edmunds, Lincoln elementary. The Junior Great Books program is for students at every grade level, from second grade through senior high school and is intended to help the students develop the habit of reading critically, interpreting what they read, and supporting their interpretations with ideas and facts from the readings. This winter, for instance, 23 interested fifth and sixth graders participated in the program at Lincoln, meeting every other Monday morning for 45 minutes to discuss their assigned readings with Mrs. Donahue and Mrs. Edmunds. Design & DECOR Decorating the one-room apartment without resorting to anonymity requires finesse. First of all, make sure the colors you choose are easy to live with 24 hours a day. Pale or neutral walls are sometimes best. Individuality can be expressed in furniture and fabric, and perhaps even in whimsical lighting. The uncluttered look is most restful when your living quarters are small, so remember not to have too many gimcracks around merely for ornament. A sofa which functions as a bed is almost a must, while built-in shelves become a great space-saver idea.

You will find patterns and designs to suit your personal preferences at WALTERS PAINT & WALLPAPER, 313 Main St., St. Joseph. Call 983-2871. Open 8-5:30. Mon. 8-8. Sat. 8-1. Wallcoverings by Van Luit, Greeff, Strahan and Schumacher. We have vinyls, foils and much more. Decorative hardware.

HELPFUL HINT:

Most living rooms and bedrooms will need at least five lamps to accomplish their visual and decorative effects.

March 31

The fifth annual Southwestern Michigan Medical and Equipment Fair will be held in the forum of Memorial hospital, St. Joseph, on Wednesday, March 31, from noon until 6 p.m.

The event is being sponsored by area hospitals.

Exhibits secured for the fair will be of interest to doctors, pharmacists, nurses, physical therapists, those involved in respiratory care, and other health care disciplines, according to Evelyn Rosche, RN, staff development coordinator at Memorial hospital and chairman for the fair.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers Could Be In The Head

—Dear Ann Landers: Your answer to people with all sorts of problems is usually, "Don't give up. Keep working toward a solution." Well, I am about to

FOR FRIDAY
MARCH 19, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
This could be a profitable day if you're not looking for something to be handed to you on a platter. Rewards must be earned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Be cooperative today toward one who has been helpful to you, though it may cause you some slight inconvenience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
You may have to tactfully remind your boss today of something you're entitled to so that it isn't overlooked.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
It's best not to leave something important today solely in the hands of another. Personal action is your only sure bet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
The results will be worth the extra effort you'll have to spend on projects you'll be involved in today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Regarding a serious matter that's been on your mind, there are positive alternatives available if you'll look for them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Material prospects are still rather favorable today, but don't expect a harvest in excess of the seeds you've sown.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
In conversations today, try not to press your points in a heavyhanded manner. A light, witty touch is called for.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Even though you won't relish the task, don't let those indebted to you go too long without a gentle reminder.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
You shouldn't have too much trouble today selling others on your ideas, especially if you tell it like it is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
The gains you're likely to make today may be small ones, but they could also be quite important. Be reasonable in your expectations.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
An opportunity that's not of immediate benefit may be presented to you today. Try to figure how it can be used in the future.

March 19, 1976

The lure of distant places is likely to be very strong this year. Begin to plan and save now so that an extended trip you've always wanted can become a reality.

give up. You are my last resort.

Do you know of any cure for persistent unpleasant breath besides the usual advice, "Brush your teeth, gargle, bland diet, etc."?

I've had numerous tests, X-rays, sinus examinations, and thorough work-ups by dentists. Everyone I've gone to says, "Learn to live with it."

I chew gum, use mouth sprays and suck on mints constantly. Nothing helps. The odor is even present when I breathe through my nose. Can you suggest something, Ann? I'd be forever grateful.

Desperate And Depressed
Dear D.: Has anyone ever mentioned this problem to you? I'm not convinced it's real — or that it is so offensive that you have cause to be "Desperate And Depressed."

Since you've been checked out by so many doctors, I'd like to suggest one more. Try a counselor or a therapist. If he (or she) tells you your anxieties are rooted in fact and not fantasy then you'd better stick to the sprays and mints and learn to live with it. My hunch is that the problem is largely in your head.

Sober Fact

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick

to death of reading letters from women who are desperate to increase their bustline, asking about creams and gadgets. (One idiot who sent $5. received a picture of a man's hand.)

And then there are women who complain because they are "top heavy." It seems nobody is satisfied with what God gave 'em.

How ironic when thousands of us have had mastectomies and are making the best of one breast and are thankful just to be alive. Call me — Eleanor.

Unbelievable?
Dear Eleanor: A letter-like yours is a sober reminder that too often we take ordinary good health for granted. Thank you for shaking us all up.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm faking the names (to protect the guilty) but I hope you will print this letter and answer my question.

Recently I was introduced to the mother of a maiden lady I have worked with for several years. My friend's name is Carmelita Garlinette. When she said, "I'd like you to meet my mother, Bessie Goldberg," I nearly went into shock. In fact, I was so dumbfounded I couldn't speak, so I just extended my hand. What should I have said?

— Unprepared

Dear Unprepared: You should

have said, "How do you do, Mrs. Goldberg."

Get Book

Dear Ann: Please forgive me for my poor English, but I haven't been in your wonderful country for very many years. Here is a problem from both me and my wife. How can we open up a conversation with new friends? We are not very good, talkers but we love people and are interested in listening and learning. If you could suggest some books to help us we would be very appreciative. Thank you. — N.G. in New York City

Dear Friend: Several years ago, Barbara Walters wrote an excellent book called, "How To Talk To Practically Anybody About Practically Anything" (publisher, Doubleday). It's the best book I know of on the subject. Call your bookstore and get a copy.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What To Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

This year's festival will be conducted by Douglas McEwen, director of choirs at Arizona State University in Tempe. Five Area High Schools In WMU Vocal Festival

Choirs from Bangor, South Haven, Three Rivers, Gables, Niles and Mattawan will be among 25 Michigan high school choirs participating in the 38th annual Southwestern Michigan Vocal Festival, to be presented in cooperation with Western Michigan University's department of music Thursday, March 25.

Over 1,200 voices will combine in the James W. Miller auditorium on the WMU campus at 7:30 p.m. for a Bicentennial concert of all-American music.

The concert is open to the public free of charge.

Conductors of the participating area high school choirs are Alison Barney, Bangor; Jack Bruin, Gables; Roger Dehn, L.C. Mohr in South Haven; Celinda DeJong, Three Rivers; William Hamberger, Niles; and Barbara Prior, Mattawan.

The first Southwestern Michigan Vocal Festival was organized in 1935 under the direction of Harper C. Maybee, the first chairman of Western's department of music. The program is designed to give experience in mass singing of good repertoire under the leadership of an experienced director.

During the concert, the orchestra will also perform movements from Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

A special event on this year's festival will be the world premiere performance of "Amens" by Daniel Pinkham. "Amens" was commissioned for the festival and the Bicentennial by WMU's Delta Iota chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, professional music fraternity. The commission was made possible by a matching grant from the national Sinfonia Foundation.

he has served as assistant director of the Meadowbrook Choral Institute, appeared as guest conductor with the Minneapolis Symphony, and recorded movie sound tracks. McEwen has also toured the Middle East and Europe as assistant conductor and soloist with the Roger Wagner Choral. During the summer of 1975 he was appointed director of choral masterworks for the International Youth and Music Festival in Vienna.

Accompanying the festival chorus will be pianist JoAnn Kulesza, a junior from Detroit, and WMU's University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Herbert Butler. The orchestra will assist on the major work for this year's festival, Howard Hanson's "Song of Democracy."

By Oswald & James Jacoby
South looked over dummy and didn't like what he saw. Not that his partner had done anything wrong, but rather that there were nine sure tricks available at outcrop and an apparent 10th visible at the four-spade contract.

Then South saw a ray of hope — in fact a couple of rays. The first one was that maybe the queen of clubs would drop doubleton. The second one was a far more complicated ray, but it might well be available if that queen didn't drop. South won the first heart with his king, cashed dummy's ace and king of trumps and ace of hearts and ruffed a heart. This left one trump outstanding, but South couldn't help that. He needed to keep a trump in dummy. Then South cashed the ace and king of clubs and led a third club.

West was on lead and could do nothing to keep South from scoring his 10th trick.

The game is match-point duplicate. You are second hand and vulnerable and dealer opens three hearts.

This is a tough one indeed, but we would bid three notrump. The hand is unsatisfactory for a takeout double and too big to pass.

When I have my hair done at the beauty parlor the room is heavy with aerosol sprays. You constantly warn us about this. Is there some way that these places can be told about the dangers of aerosol sprays so that customers can be protected?

Mrs. J.B. Penn.
Dear Mrs. B.: A recent report pointed out that coal miners and hairdressers are considered high risks for developing chronic diseases of the lungs.

Dr. Alvin Palmer, of the University of Cincinnati, believes that aerosol hair sprays can be compared to coal dust as an irritant to the lungs. He says that "the risk is greater for cosmetologists working in small salons because these usually have a general lack of ventilation."

In such a situation it is obvious that you, too, are being exposed to unnecessary hazards while sitting in a hairdressing parlor.

There are products now that serve the same function for the hair without the aerosol packaging. You, the consumer, can be the greatest force for insuring that these safer products are used.

Both the client and the hairdresser will be the beneficiaries of this sensible approach to grooming.

It was found that I have a "pouch" in my esophagus. This causes food to get stuck and is most uncomfortable. Surgery has not been recommended. I wonder if this condition will disappear by itself.

Mr. T.U., Del.
A pouch, or diverticulum of the esophagus, usually occurs in the "neck" portion of the ophagus.

If the pouch is large enough, food can be trapped in it. Difficult in swallowing may result. The diagnosis is readily made by X-ray examination with barium. This outlines the exact position and size of the pouch.

The fact that surgery has not been suggested for you simply means that the diverticulum is not large enough to be a threat to health.

These pouches, caused by a weakness of the thin muscular wall of the esophagus, can be safely repaired by operation. But the decision as to when and if surgery is indicated depends on each individual problem.

It is difficult to believe that a diverticulum, once it has formed, could spontaneously disappear.

Court Renews Room's View

If a dining room or living room has an ordinary or undesirable view, it's easy to create a new one, with a garden atmosphere.

First enclose a courtyard around the window with a screen of wood two-by-twos set vertically in two-by-four stringers and four-by-four posts.

Low-maintenance evergreen plantings will add color and textures.

A birdbath and feeders will provide daytime interest and subtle lighting will add interest to dinner parties.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers Could Be In The Head

Dear Ann Landers: Your answer to people with all sorts of problems is usually, "Don't give up. Keep working toward a solution." Well, I am about to

FOR FRIDAY
MARCH 19, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This could be a profitable day if you're not looking for something to be handed to you on a platter. Rewards must be earned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be cooperative today toward one who has been helpful to you, though it may cause you some slight inconvenience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may have to tactfully remind your boss today of something you're entitled to so that it isn't overlooked.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best not to leave something important today solely in the hands of another. Personal action is your only sure bet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The results will be worth the extra effort you'll have to spend on projects you'll be involved in today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Regarding a serious matter that's been on your mind, there are positive alternatives available if you'll look for them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Material prospects are still rather favorable today, but don't expect a harvest in excess of the seeds you've sown.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In conversations today, try not to press your points in a heavyhanded manner. A light, witty touch is called for.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you won't relish the task, don't let those indebted to you go too long without a gentle reminder.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You shouldn't have too much trouble today selling others on your ideas, especially if you tell it like it is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The gains you're likely to make today may be small ones, but they could also be quite important. Be reasonable in your expectations.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) An opportunity that's not of immediate benefit may be presented to you today. Try to figure how it can be used in the future.

March 19, 1976

The lure of distant places is likely to be very strong this year. Begin to play and save now so that an extended trip you've always wanted can become a reality.

give up. You are my last resort.

Do you know of any cure for persistent unpleasant breath besides the usual advice, "Brush your teeth, gargle, bland diet, etc.?"

I've had numerous tests, X-rays, sinus examinations, and thorough work-ups by dentists. Everyone I've gone to says, "Learn to live with it."

I chew gum, use mouth sprays and suck on mints constantly. Nothing helps. The odor is even present when I breathe through my nose. Can you suggest something, Ann? I'd be forever grateful. — Desperate And Depressed

Dear D.: Has anyone ever mentioned this problem to you? I'm not convinced it's real — or that it is so offensive that you have cause to be "Desperate and Depressed."

Since you've been checked out by so many doctors, I'd like to suggest one more. Try a counselor or a therapist. If he (or she) tells you your anxieties are rooted in fact and not fantasy then you'd better stick to the sprays and mints and learn to live with it. My hunch is that the problem is largely in your head.

Sober Fact

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick

to death of reading letters from women who are desperate to increase their bustline, asking about creams and gadgets. (One idiot who sent $5 received a picture of a man's hand.)

And then there are women who complain because they are "top heavy." It seems nobody is satisfied with what God gave 'em.

How ironic when thousands of us have had mastectomies and are making the best of one breast and are thankful just to be alive. Call me — Eleanor

Dear Eleanor: A letter like yours is a sober reminder that too often we take ordinary good health for granted. Thank you for shaking us all up.

Unbelievable?

Dear Ann Landers: I'm faking the names (to protect the guilty) but I hope you will print this letter and answer my question.

Recently I was introduced to the mother of a maiden lady I have worked with for several years. My friend's name is Carmelita Garlinette. When she said, "I'd like you to meet my mother, Bessie Goldberg," I nearly went into shock. In fact, I was so dumbfounded I couldn't speak, so I just extended my hand. What should I have said? — Unprepared have said, "How do you do, Mrs. Goldberg."

ANN LANDERS

Get Book

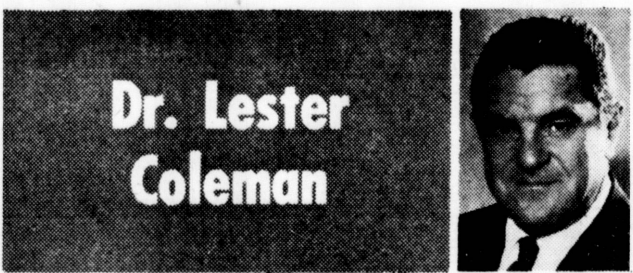

Dear Ann: Please forgive me for my poor English, but I haven't been in your wonderful country for very many years.

Here is a problem from both me and my wife. How can we open up a conversation with new friends? We are not very good talkers but we love people and are interested in listening and learning. If you could suggest some books to help us we would be very appreciative. Thank you. — N.G. In New York City

Dear Friend: Several years ago, Barbara Walters wrote an excellent book called, "How To Talk To Practically Anybody About Practically Anything" (publisher, Doubleday). It's the best book I know of on the subject. Call your bookstore and get a copy.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What To Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Five Area High Schools In WMU Vocal Festival

Choirs from Bangor, South Haven, Three Rivers, Gobles, Niles and Mattawan will be among 25 Michigan high school choirs participating in the 38th annual Southwestern Michigan Vocal Festival, to be presented in cooperation with Western Michigan university's department of music Thursday, March 25.

Over 1,200 voices will combine in the James W. Miller auditorium on the WMU campus at 7:30 p.m. for a Bicentennial concert of all-American music.

The concert is open to the public free of charge.

Conductors of the participating area high school choirs are Alison Barney, Bangor; Jack Bruin, Gobles; Roger Dehn, L.C. Mohr in South Haven; Celinda DeJong, Three Rivers; William Hamberger, Niles, and Barbara Prior, Mattawan.

The first Southwestern Michigan Vocal Festival was organized in 1935 under the direction of Harper C. Maybee, the first chairman of Western's department of music. The program is designed to give experience in mass singing of good repertoire under the leadership of an experienced director.

This year's festival will be conducted by Douglas McEwen, director of choirs at Arizona State university in Tempe. With a master's degree from Indiana university and a doctorate from the University of Northern Colorado, McEwen was previously director of choral activities at the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque.

As a professional musician, he has served as assistant director of the Meadowbrook Choral Institute, appeared as guest conductor with the Minneapolis Symphony, and recorded movie sound tracks. McEwen has also toured the Middle East and Europe as assistant conductor and soloist with the Roger Wagner Choral. During the summer of 1975 he was appointed director of choral masterworks for the International Youth and Music Festival in Vienna.

Accompanying the festival chorus will be pianist JoAnn Kulesza, a junior from Detroit, and WMU's University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Herbert Butler. The orchestra will assist on the major work for this year's festival, Howard Hanson's "Song of Democracy."

During the concert, the orchestra will also perform movements from Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

A special event on this year's festival will be the world premiere performance of "Amens" by Daniel Pinkham. "Amens" was commissioned for the festival and the Bicentennial by WMU's Delta Iota chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, professional music fraternity. The commission was made possible by a matching grant from the national Sinfonia Foundation.

"Amens" is designed to be an avant-garde choral experience suitable for high school choirs. The work includes pre-recorded electronic sounds. Composer Daniel Pinkham is on the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music, and is music director of historic King's Chapel in Boston. He has studied with such artists as Walter Piston, Aaron Copland, E. Power Biggs, Arthur Honegger, Samuel Barber and Nadie Boulanger. Pinkham has over 100 published compositions for virtually every media. The composer will guest conduct the premiere of "Amens."

The festival committee includes Miriam Haiduck of Wyoming Park, Ron Rogers of East Kentwood, Duane Davis of Grand Rapids Creston, and three representatives of WMU's department of music, Marilyn Heim, Mel Ivey, and Carl Doubleday, who serves as executive secretary for the festival.

Her Views On Rape, Sex, Abortion Raise Eyebrows

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — The wife of the man who would be Canada's prime minister if the Conservatives win the next election is 24 years old, uses her maiden name preceded by the feminist Ms., and is a subject of controversy because of her views on premarital sex, rape and abortion.

Maureen McTeer, whose husband Joe Clark became the Conservative party leader last month, also is studying law and she said in a recent interview that her husband's campaign for the leadership has set her seriously behind in her studies.

Clark, 36, is now the leader of the opposition to the Liberal party government of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, 56, whose 27-year-old wife Margaret who also has spoken out on similar issues and has been similarly criticized by some Canadians.

Now that Ms. McTeer is the wife of the opposition party leader, people have been drawing parallels between her and Mrs. Trudeau. Ms. McTeer says the only resemblance she can see is that both are in their 20s and both are brunettes. Mrs. Trudeau has three children; Ms. McTeer has none.

"I always thought that if I was blonde and five-foot-two, no one would draw the comparison," she said, adding that she would prefer to meet Mrs. Trudeau in private rather than on television as has been suggested.

"I don't know the woman. I've never met her but I assume I'm going to meet her. I mean, it's inevitable."

She said her attitude toward Mrs. Trudeau is that she is a political foe, not an enemy, but their friendship could only take place "very much within the confines, within the limits, of the next election," which is two or three years off.

"I'm in a touchy position because my husband wants her husband's job. Her husband is number one and mine is minus one," she said.

"And I don't think her husband is very fond of Joe and he's probably mentioned that in her."

Last year, Ms. McTeer raised eyebrows at a meeting of a Parliament wives association when she suggested that women who sacrifice their own careers for their husband's political career should be compensated.

She scoffs at the reaction in the United States after President Ford's wife Betty commented in an interview last year that she would not be surprised if at some point her 18-year-old daughter told her she was having an affair.

"Good heavens, anyone who think teen-agers aren't having sexual intercourse must be blind," Ms. McTeer said. "You can't close your eyes and make things go away."

Ms. McTeer has said of rape that the victims are treated like the accused in trials.

"I think judges should be restrained from making remarks — undermining a woman's testimony. They don't understand that rape is a total violation of a woman's being."

On abortion, she says women should have the right to choose whether they want one, and for those who do, abortion clinics should be available.

"However, I do see the abortion problem as the outcome of our total failure with birth control," she says.

"No one ever seems to get into that, although the pro-abortionists do seem more responsible than anti-abortionists on the subject. We have to concentrate on family planning and contraception, especially at the teenage level."

Those views and the fact that she still uses her maiden name have brought criticism in letters to editors in Canadian newspapers from readers advising her not to become an embarrassment to her husband.

Ms. McTeer said that after the Conservative party leadership campaign, even her mother counseled her: "Maureen, you've just got to stop now. You can't do this any more. Now just fade away."

"Sure, I could hide in a cupboard for the next 10 years," Ms. McTeer said, but she added that she intends to express her personal opinions.

She said she was surprised at the fuss over the use of her maiden name, but she added that she doesn't mind if people feel more comfortable calling her Mrs. Clark.

Ms. McTeer gave up two months of her law studies to campaign for her husband, but she said it was a decision the couple carefully planned.

"I couldn't just be selfish," she said, adding that his decision to run for the leadership was made equally by both of them, like all decisions they make.

"I believe that when you do that type of thing you really have to do it together. If I was vehemently against it, he wouldn't have run," she said.

Besides, she added she considered herself a moral and political asset to his campaign.

"It is lonely to go where you meet people you've never met before, people who may or may not be hostile. And he had no advance man. I knew I could perform a useful function by keeping contact with headquarters," she said.

Ms. McTeer was born in Cumberland Ontario, 25 miles east of Ottawa, and was educated in a one-room bilingual school during her first eight years of schooling.

"We were country kids and I think that's the best way to grow up," she said, recalling building a tree house, riding horses, and playing hockey, football and baseball with the local boys who never had a large enough group to form a team.

"We never had an allowance so we always had to earn our own money." She was a babysitter for the neighbor's children and picked fruit and vegetables at a nearby farm as did her brother John and four sisters, Colleen, Pat, Pam and Jane.

She learned both French and English with 30 classmates from a woman teacher who made them memorize everything, "and forced us to discipline our minds."

At age 12, she started going to political meetings with her father, "so I could stay up after nine." By 16 she was politically independent and heading a local young Conservatives club, and by 18, she was on the Ontario Conservative youth executive. In the 1972 federal election she campaigned in Ottawa for Hugh Segal, one of a foursome she, hummed with at university.

It was at the university that one of Clark's friends told her he needed an assistant who was bilingual and able.

"I was flattered," she said, and took the job.

She and Clark began to date in March of 1973. "He gave me 21 flowers on my birthday so I knew he liked me," she says jokingly. They were married the following June.

Jury Hears Defiant Patty On Tape As Trial Closes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's final gesture of defiance, two days after her capture, was the last evidence her jury heard as testimony in her eight-week-old bank robbery trial came to a dramatic end.

"Gentlemen, the evidence is closed," U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter said Wednesday after the government played for the jury a profanity-tinted jailhouse recording between Miss Hearst and a childhood friend.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. and defense counsel F. Lee

Bailey planned to present their closing arguments to the jury of seven women and five men today. Carter has said he will send the case to the panel Friday morning.

Bailey wrapped up his defense by calling the defendant's mother, Catherine Hearst, to testify that the 22-year-old newspaper heiress had been a "warm and loving girl" prior to her Feb. 4, 1974, kidnapping.

In 37 days, the jury heard from 67 witnesses and had more than 100 exhibits and pieces of evidence to consider.

The government tried to prove Miss Hearst willingly participated in the robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch 10 weeks after her kidnapping. Her attorneys argued she took part in the holdup in fear of death at the hands of her Symbionese Liberation Army captors.

Browning got the last shot Wednesday, playing for the hushed courtroom a taped recording of Miss Hearst in custody, bitterly protesting her Sept. 18 arrest to friend Patricia Tobin and declaring her commitment to "revolutionary feminism."

Sprinkled with laughter, sarcasm and salty epithets, the 20-minute tape enraptured the jury and was in sharp contrast with the quiet courtroom demeanor of Miss Hearst.

Many of the jurors bowed their heads and listened intently. One sat with his eyes closed the entire time, and a woman juror stared almost constantly at the defendant.

room and prowled the corridor, smoking cigarettes, until the tape was concluded.

Miss Hearst appeared unusually cheerful at a brief "housekeeping" session in the afternoon outside the presence of the jury. She smiled and chatted with an attorney while others discussed legal matters.

With the exception of the playing of the tape, Miss Hearst appeared relaxed and alert as her case neared the jury. She flashed a smile when her mother strolled to the witness stand. Her father, San Francisco Examiner president Randolph A. Hearst, had testified briefly Tuesday.

"She was a warm and loving girl," Mrs. Hearst said. "We always lived a very close family life. She and I shared a mutual enthusiasm for art so we always had a great deal in common."

Speaking in a soft Southern accent, the Georgia-born Mrs. Hearst was asked by Bailey if the defendant had been "strong-willed" as a youth. "Yes," she replied.

Miss Hearst's father had described his daughter as "warm, strong-willed and independent" in his testimony.

"SIT AND SWEAT": F. Lee Bailey, second from right, tells a San Francisco news conference Wednesday, when asked his own feelings on the outcome of the Patty Hearst trial: "I'll just sit and sweat." (AP Wirephoto)

Ban Might Cost State

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state may have to buy back some $1.6 million in oil and natural gas leases if it bans drilling in the Pigeon River Country State Forest, says a special environmental subcommittee.

Terry Yonker, executive secretary for the Michigan Environmental Review Board, said Wednesday a subcommittee of the board made the recommendation earlier this week.

The full board plans to make a final recommendation to the governor on March 25, though the Natural Resources Commission must make the final decision on drilling, probably at its April meeting.

A special four-member subcommittee of the board concluded that leases sold to four companies in 1968 must be bought back if no drilling is allowed in the 145-square-mile forest in northern Lower Michigan.

"The companies do have some investments and it was not the companies' fault that this predicament came about," said Yonker.

"It would be fair if we were to say no-drill if we were to return the appropriate amount to the companies," he said, adding the courts would have to determine the "fair market value" of the leases.

Udall, Wallace To Appear

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace and Arizona Congressman Morris Udall, candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, have said they will be in Detroit, April 10.

State party chairman Morley Winograd said Wednesday the candidates will attend a state Democratic dinner and question and answer session.

Winograd said Wallace and Udall are scheduled to speak at the party's annual Jefferson-Jackson Dinner in Cobo Hall, and answer questions from Democrats during afternoon interviews.

Though all other Democratic presidential candidates have also been invited, no others have yet said they would come, Winograd said.

Michigan's presidential primary May 18 will have a dozen Democrats and two Republicans on the ballot.

Right To Work Chief Expected To Enter Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new campaign financing law is making it possible for advocates of a cause to spread their message with federal money under the guise of a presidential campaign.

One person expected to take advantage of the law is Reed G. Larson, executive vice president of the National Right to Work Committee, who says he is planning on entering the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Larson would be following the same strategy as Ellen McCormack, a Long Island housewife who is campaigning in the Democratic primaries with federal matching funds to promote efforts to end legal abortion.

"We've been thinking about it ever since she qualified for the funds," Larson said Wednesday. "If she can take advantage of the law and use it to focus attention on a specific issue, why can't we?"

The right-to-work committee, a conservative lobbying group with headquarters in nearby Fairfax, Va., has been a strong opponent of organized labor principally in the fight against the union shop, in which workers are required to join a union. To finance its operations, the committee raises millions of dollars through computerized appeals to its growing list of donors.

With this experience, Larson and his associates apparently would have little difficulty raising the money needed to qualify for federal matching funds from the Federal Election Commission.

Larson acknowledges that while he is unlikely to "get very many votes in any primary," a presidential campaign "will give us a platform to articulate our opposition to compulsory unionism."

He said all of the Democratic candidates support the union shop and are using federal funds to spread their views. "So maybe it's time somebody spoke out in favor of the right to work," said the 53-year-old Larson.

He said several "legal and tactical" issues need to be resolved before he makes a final decision on running for president — "The concept is sound. It's just a question of judgment whether the effort is going to be sufficiently productive to be worth it."

To qualify for matching funds, a candidate must secure at least $100,000 in contributions in amounts not over $250, with $5,000 to be raised in each of any 20 states.

Neal Stabler, vice chairman of the Federal Election Commission, said a Larson campaign apparently would be within the law "as long as the public is presented clearly with the request for contributions and as long as the public knows who they are supporting and why they are running for office."

"If there are that many people (the number required to raise the $100,000) who think this is a valid cause, then (that's) a political action operation that needs support," Stabler said.

Damage To Russian Wheat Widespread

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are increasing indications that winter weather has damaged much of the Soviet Union's winter grain crop and that Russian farmers will be forced to replant large areas this spring, according to the Agriculture Department.

The development is leading U.S. officials to say there may be higher-than-normal Soviet grain buying abroad, possibly in the United States. That would be good news for grain growers and the agriculture industry at large. Whether it translated into higher American consumer prices would depend on the U.S. grain harvest this year.

The Agriculture Department has been saying for some time that the Soviet winter wheat crop got off to a poor start last fall as a result of drought. Thus, when winter cold forced plants into dormancy they were not adequately developed to survive.

"Cold weather in February threatened this vulnerable crop still more, particularly in the south where snow cover was sparse," the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday. "Considerable replanting to other grains is probable."

One favorable development for the Soviet Union has been that "snow has continued to pile up" in areas where spring wheat will be planted, meaning that the outlook for soil moisture appears good.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Bell said last week that the Soviet winter wheat crop was in poor shape. Winter wheat accounts for about 40 per cent of total production, with the remainder coming from crops planted in the spring, he said.

But most of the wheat procured by the Soviet government for city consumers comes from winter crop areas, Bell said. Most of the spring crop is consumed on farms where it is produced. "I think the possibilities of having a normal winter wheat crop in the Soviet Union (this year) is nil," Bell said. "I think it will be below normal."

Bell added that without a normal winter wheat crop "the chances of above-normal imports into the Soviet Union are higher than they would be under normal conditions."

Even with evidence that there has been a deterioration of Soviet winter grain prospects, officials caution that it is still too early for making predictions on what the total 1976 Russian harvest may be.

Drought last year resulted in the smallest Soviet grain harvest in a decade and forced Moscow to buy extensively from other countries.

About 13.3 million metric tons of U.S. grain, mainly corn, have been sold to the Soviets since last July, Bell and others say that more sales are likely if the next few months. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 33.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Morgue Sold Body Parts, Probers Say specialist in medical malpractice suits, said he knows "that organs are removed by all doctors performing autopsies."

"If someone is trying to stop my man, then they'll have to stop all of them."

Spitz also has said he will seek a legal opinion from county officials as to the legality of removing organs and turning them over to research firms without approval from relatives of the deceased.

Spitz said despite the charges organs are sold, the only money received was in "service fees" which went into the research firm he heads.

In a copyrighted article in Wednesday's editions of the Detroit News, the doctor was quoted as saying:

"It is not legal to sell parts of bodies. I know, but we do not sell them. We give them to various research organizations and they send us a service fee they normally pay."

However, the News said investigators for the county's Organized Crime Task Force have reported the morgue has sold body parts, including brains, hearts, lungs and other body parts and fluids, without the consent of relatives of the deceased.

Spitz acknowledged the service fee goes into the Michigan Medical-Legal Educational Research Association, Inc., "which uses the funds to continue its research into infant crib deaths."

"I never received a dime from the research company even though I am president and treasurer and an employee," Dr. Spitz said.

"Everything I did was focused on increasing medical technology and cross-checking our own conclusions about the causes of deaths."

He said, in apparent reference to those responsible for the probe, "It's planned, coordinated, malicious, what they are doing."

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge James O'Hair authorized investigators to seize morgue records, calling the charges "serious allegations which must be investigated thoroughly."

The News said morgue employees, who brought the charges to the attention to the News, said organizations pay from $2 to $75 for various body parts.

One employee said that, until last July, several human brains which had not been damaged were removed from bodies during autopsies and put into barrels.

"At one time there were two barrels filled with brains," the employee said. He said a truck from Kilgore International, Inc. of Cokewater, Mich. came and picked up the barrels.

Spitz said he sent 12 to 14 barrels or parts of brains to the Kilgore firm, which he said was experimenting with "plastelizing" them for use in training medical students.

"They returned all the plastic brains and tried to pay me $400 for my services," he said. "I refused the fee and they sent the $400 to my association, and the money was used to continue our research."

During an autopsy, parts of the body may be removed for further examination, but they normally are placed back in the body for burial.

Alysius Suchy, Wayne County corporation counsel, said he would expect lawsuits to develop from disclosure that bodies, which have been autopsied at the morgue, have been buried without some body parts.

District Court Elections Law Called 'Confusing'

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — A new state law governing district court elections may give incumbents a distinct advantage while confusing state voters, says the elections director of the Macomb County Clerk's office. The new law was signed into law by Gov. William Milliken last September. It states when the terms of office of two or more judges in the same district expire at the same time, each of the judgeships must appear separately on the ballot. As a result, challengers must specify which position they are seeking.

Although stopping short of outright disapproval of the bill, Macomb Elections Director Louis Kreiter cited several drawbacks:

"It is a political fact that incumbents always have an advantage at election time," Kreiter noted. "And this is more so for all state judges who actually have the word incumbent listed under their name on the ballot."

Kreiter explained attorneys often run for district judgeships but this may change as a result of the bill.

"For example, a lawyer may not want to come out and say which specific judge he is running against," Kreiter said, "fearing that if he lost, he may well have to argue a case before that judge in the future."

Prior to the new legislation, both incumbents and challengers were lumped together in the primary. If two posts were open, the four top vote-getters would vie in the general election, he explained.

Now, each of the two candidates with the largest vote total in each race will meet in the general election.

There are other problems with the legislation, Kreiter said.

"Let's say one district has two incumbents running for reelection and thus has two separate races," he said. "It is very possible that a candidate may lose one of these primary races and actually have more votes than a successful challenger in the other race."

Kreiter also said it will require more ballot space to list separate races and will be confusing to voters.

Couple Will Get Land Deed After Nine-Year Wait

BLOOMINGDALE — A family that purchased a village-owned lot from the village council here nine years ago will soon be getting the deed to that land. The Bloomingdale village council last night deeded around some technical obstacles by adopting a resolution to deliver to Frank and Helen Sites, a deed to the vacant lot on North Kalamazoo street.

Village Clerk Jim D. Petty admitted that "probably our village attorney was a little slow" about getting the transaction completed.

Petty said that when the paperwork was completed recently, the village found that title insurance could not be issued until the village could find the village council minutes deeding the land to the couple.

Petty said when a search of the council minutes of nine years ago proved fruitless, the council adopted another resolution paving the way for transfer of the land to the Sites couple.

The clerk said the couple was not angry about the delay, but just wanted to get proof of ownership.

The lot has not been on village tax rolls for the past nine years, he added.

In other action, the council adopted resolutions asking that the state highway department approve a change from angle parking to parallel on one block of Van Buren street by November, 1977, and on one block of Spring street by November, 1979. Both blocks are in the business district.

The council also voted to turn over to Bloomingdale township, the operation of the sanitary landfill used by the village and township, and to lease to the township the land the landfill occupies.

The landfill will continue to be available to both village and township residents. Coupons for use of the landfill will be sold by the township.

The next meeting of the council was set for April 12.

In Full Production

New $1.5 million plant of Gast Manufacturing Corp. at Bridgman is now in full production, according to Jack Huffman, training director for the firm. Some 25 workers are engaged in new structure in production of air compressors and vacuum pumps. Construction was completed about a month ago, although exterior landscaping remains to be done this spring. An open house is being planned for spring. New plant puts the company back in the town where it was founded in the mid-1920s. Main plant is located on M-139 near Benton Harbor. With opening of new building, Gast has closed leased plant it occupied for several years on Empire avenue in Benton township. Bridgman plant is located between Red Arrow highway and I-94, west of main business district. (Adolph Hann aerial photo)

Housewife Opens Home To Plan Tax Fight

By LARRY MACINTYRE
Staff Writer
WATERVLIET — A Watervliet township housewife has scheduled a meeting in her home tonight to outline plans for asking the state tax commission to investigate the reassessment this year of property in the township.

Mrs. Robert (Karen) Postelli said the meeting is open to all township residents and will begin at 8 p.m. at her A-frame home, box 441, North Watervliet road.

Supervisor Lyle Woodworth earlier this month announced that he was sending out notices of property reassessments that would bring an increase in property assessments, and in property taxes, for about half the township's property owners.

The higher property values will be reflected on the township's 1976 tax rolls, said Woodworth who has announced he will not be a candidate for re-election this year.

Mrs. Postelli, who described herself as an "irate taxpayer," has told this newspaper previously she does not believe property assessment increases have been uniform throughout the township.

She said her property was first assessed at $38,000, and after meetings with the township's board of review, that figure was lowered to $30,000 on the house she said she paid $60,000 for in 1973.

But Mrs. Postelli said that other homeowners in the township are not being assessed near what they originally paid for their properties.

She added that yesterday township officials prevented her from examining assessment figures for other property owners on the latest township tax assessment roll.

Woodworth today said Mrs. Postelli, whose brother-in-law is the township's attorney, was not prevented from seeing the assessment roll but was prevented from seeing the "work cards" assessors use in arriving at assessment figures.

The supervisor said he has since obtained a legal ruling and that the work cards will now be available for public inspection.

In announcing tax assessment increases on March 1, Woodworth said the reassessments were undertaken "because of some very unfair tax assessments in the township."

He said the last formal reassessment of all property in the township was in 1960.

There is also a state law which became effective this year that requires municipalities to assess real property at 50 per cent of market value.

CLOSED IN PROTEST: Most South Haven area service stations, auto repair garages and service departments of auto dealerships were closed today as mechanics joined in a statewide protest of legislation governing vehicle repairs. Rome's Standard, at Blue Star Memorial highway and M-140, was typical of deserted stations. About 30 South Haven area mechanics, many driving tow trucks, left in caravan at 6 a.m. today for capital where protest is to be staged. Except for emergencies, there will be no tow truck service today in South Haven area. Some discount gas stations which do not service vehicles, remained open. (Tom Renner photo)

BUT THEY LEARN TO COPE

No Cure Seen For Stutterers

By TOM DONIA
KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — "Stuttering can run your life, your personality, if you let it." So says Tux McCormick, who is in intensive stuttering therapy at Western Michigan University here.

"A broken arm you can deal with — it's sort of outside yourself. But stuttering is very close to your personality," adds Jeff Sodini, a speech pathology major at WMU.

Both are stutterers. They and eight other persons who also stutter have begun a "stuttering council." Its goals, like those of similar councils around the country, are to provide self-help through mutual support and to communicate with other people about the problems of stuttering.

No one knows the exact causes of stuttering, council members say, although various theories suggest possible reasons. The origins of the problem may be organic — the stutterer is born with a learning disability. It may be a learned behavior — the stutterer simply has learned to speak improperly. Or it may be the stutterer is neurotic, maladapted to his environment.

In any case, there appears to be no one effective "cure."

"The therapy that is taught at Western is based on the idea that you must first recognize the problem, and then work on it. The aim of therapy is not fluency, it is being comfortable with the problem. You still go on stuttering, but you don't get upright about it," says Sodini.

Facing up to the problem is a major hurdle for some people, says McCormick. He has come to Kalamazoo for WMU's therapy program.

"I grew up in a small town before moving to Indianapolis, and I was the only person I knew who stuttered. I thought there must be something terribly wrong, that I must have been very dumb or something."

"Some stutterers attempt to give the impression they are normal speakers. They use little devices to cover up the problem."

McCormick said he has used the tricks: One of them is to use pause words like "ah" and "um" until the stutterer is sure he can get out the next word without stuttering.

McCormick and Sodini agree that trying to hide the problem is not healthy. "It takes a lot of work to avoid stuttering this way," said Sodini.

"I would get very tired and nervous after a long conversation when I used these cover-up tricks," adds McCormick.

How does a stutterer feel about himself?

"The major demon is the frustration of not communicating," says Sodini. "And the stutterer has a very low frustration tolerance."

"I would not answer questions in class because of my stuttering," says McCormick. "It might have appeared that I didn't know the answer but actually I didn't want to stutter in front of everybody."

Stutterers often are sensitive about their speech pattern and object to jokes on the subject. But thanks to the therapy program, both McCormick and Sodini are comfortable with those jokes now. "I love 'em," Sodini says of stuttering jokes.

"I was sensitive," comments McCormick, "but not any more. If I can find a good joke, I'll tell it."

The thing both men object to a great deal is those people who "fill in" words. When the stutterer is having difficulty with a word and the listener knows what the word is, he will often "offer" the word for the stutterer.

"I know people are trying to be helpful, but it gets very frustrating. You learn not to depend on yourself then, because you are depending on other people to say your words for you. What happens when they're not there?"

"I hate it," Sodini says emphatically.

It is often true, although not always, that stutterers have no problem singing or acting. One country and western singer, Mel Tillis, for example, has a severe stuttering problem.

"I can act in a school play with no trouble," says McCormick. "I'm playing someone else. I'm not being myself."

But reading out loud is like talking — both present difficulties.

For some, those difficulties become obsessions.

"When we started a stuttering council in Indianapolis, a man showed up to a meeting who said he bought his house on a certain street because he could pronounce the street name without stuttering," McCormick says.

South Pole Trip Veteran Gets Lost In Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A veteran of Adm. Richard Byrd's first antarctic expedition of a half-century ago wandered lost in the wilds of Alaska after losing his way in the thousand-mile Anchorage-to-Nome dog sled race, officials report.

Col. Norman Vaughan, 70, was rescued after three days and has quit the race, officials said Wednesday.

A spokeswoman for the Iditarod Trail Committee said Vaughan apparently missed a trail used in the race after leaving a checkpoint 182 miles from Anchorage.

A volunteer pilot spotted sled tracks off the trail and alerted a two-man snowmobile team.

Vaughan was said to be in good condition at the lodge. Six of his dogs were flown to Anchorage, but Vaughan stayed behind because the four other dogs ran away during the loading process and he wouldn't come back without them.

U.S. Imports More Oil Than It Produces For First Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States last week imported more oil than it produced for the first time in history even though Americans are demanding less oil now than they did before the Arab oil embargo.

The figures, released Wednesday by the American Petroleum Institute and confirmed by the Federal Energy Administration, show domestic production continuing a six-year decline and U.S. imports rising to record levels to meet demands that nevertheless are two million barrels per day below their peak level before the 1973 embargo.

Imports have been rising since the end of the embargo in early 1974 and crept above the 8-million-barrels-a-day level last week for the first time ever.

Domestic production has been declining steadily from its peak of over 9 million barrels a day, recorded in 1970.

The result is that although conservation efforts, recession and mild winter weather since 1973 have lessened the amount of oil Americans use, the United States is more dependent on foreign oil sources than it was when the embargo was imposed.

The industry institute said total imports last week rose to 8,196,000 barrels a day. Domestic production, meanwhile, came to 8,013,500 last week, the API said.

Imports now comprise 45 percent of the oil used in the United States. Last year, they accounted for 30 percent, the API said.

Reasons for the decline in U.S. production are hotly disputed. Industry officials point out that prices of domestic oil are controlled and they argue that higher prices are needed to stimulate production. They say price controls have served to keep prices too low to provide incentives for new exploration — extremely costly when it involves searching the ocean's floor or searches in remote areas.

Industry leaders note a prolonged slump in domestic drilling and explorations. For example, the number of wells completed dropped from a record 58,000 in 1956 to a low of 27,300 in 1971. Well completions — final word on whether a potential drilling site will produce oil or is barren — rose after oil prices increased following the embargo and last year hit the 38,000 level.

On the other hand, critics of the industry claim oil companies are deliberately deferring production to get higher prices. These critics maintain oil firms abandon old wells still containing oil rather than produce at a slightly higher cost, what is left in them.

U.S. demand for oil has only recently approached its previous high of more than 18 million barrels a day in the first quarter of 1973. Over all of that year, the average daily American demand stood at 17,308,000 barrels per day and imports averaged 6,256,000 of that.

The latest four-week averages by the EIA indicate total U.S. demand, including natural gas liquids and supplies drawn from stockpiles, is rising slowly from last year, increasing by about 521,000 barrels per day, or 3 percent over the past year.

An API spokesman had no immediate explanation for the steep rise in imports and could not explain whether it was industry-wide or was concentrated in a few companies or regions.

A spokeswoman for the Federal Energy Administration confirmed the institute's report that imports outpaced domestic production.

Total imports stand 58 percent above the 5,181,000 barrels a day shipped in year ago. Itemized, the figures show:

— Foreign crude oil consumption increased in a year from 3,325,000 barrels a day to 5,756,000 per day, or by 73 percent.

— Imports of refined products have climbed 51 percent from 1,858,000 barrels daily a year ago to 2,440,000 per day.

U.S. Imports More Oil Than It Produces For First Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States last week imported more oil than it produced for the first time in history even though Americans are demanding less oil now than they did before the Arab oil embargo.

The figures, released Wednesday by the American Petroleum Institute and confirmed by the Federal Energy Administration, show domestic production continuing a six-year decline and U.S. imports rising to record levels to meet demands that nevertheless are two million barrels per day below their peak level before the 1973 embargo.

Imports have been rising since the end of the embargo in early 1974 and crept above the 8-million-barrels-a-day level last week for the first time ever.

Domestic production has been declining steadily from its peak of over 9 million barrels a day, recorded in 1970.

The result is that although conservation efforts, recession and mild winter weather since 1973 have lessened the amount of oil Americans use, the United States is more dependent on foreign oil sources than it was when the embargo was imposed.

The industry institute said total imports last week rose to 8,196,000 barrels a day. Domestic production, meanwhile, came to 8,013,500 last week, the API said.

Imports now comprise 45 per cent of the oil used in the United States. Last year, they accounted for 30 per cent, the API said. Reasons for the decline in U.S. production are hotly disputed. Industry officials point out that prices of domestic oil are controlled and they argue that higher prices are needed to stimulate production. They say price controls have served to keep prices too low to provide incentives for new exploration — extremely costly when it involves searching the ocean's floor or searches in remote areas.

Industry leaders note a prolonged slump in domestic drilling and explorations. For example, the number of wells completed dropped from a record 58,000 in 1956 to a low of 27,300 in 1971. Well completions — final word on whether a potential drilling site will produce oil or is barren — rose after oil prices increased following the embargo and last year hit the 38,000 level.

On the other hand, critics of the industry claim oil companies are deliberately deferring production to get higher prices. These critics maintain oil firms abandon old wells still containing oil rather than produce, at slightly higher cost, what is left in them.

U.S. demand for oil has only recently approached its previous high of more than 18 million barrels a day in the first quarter of 1973. Over all of that year, the average daily American demand stood at 17,308,000 barrels per day and imports averaged 6,256,000 of that.

The latest four-week averages by the FEA indicate total U.S. demand, including natural gas liquids and supplies drawn from stockpiles, is rising slowly from last year, increasing by about 521,000 barrels per day, or 3 per cent over the past year.

An API spokesman had no immediate explanation for the steep rise in imports and could not explain whether it was industry-wide or was concentrated in a few companies or regions.

A spokeswoman for the Federal Energy Administration confirmed the institute's report that imports outpaced domestic production.

Total imports stand 58 per cent above the 5,183,000 barrels a day shipped in year ago. Itemized, the figures show:

—Foreign crude oil consumption increased in a year from 3,325,000 barrels a day to 5,756,000 per day, or by 73 per cent.

—Imports of refined products have climbed 31 per cent from 1,858,000 barrels daily a year ago to 2,440,000 per day

Pharmacists Will Sponsor Poison Prevention Week

LANSING — The Michigan Pharmaceutical Association has announced that it will sponsor Poison Prevention Week, March 21-27. The emphasis of this year's program will be "Protect Your Children" through the use of child-resistant packaging.

Jack West, R.Ph., president of the Michigan Pharmaceutical Association, stated, "The pharmacists of this state feel that we must protect the young children, our country's greatest resource, from the tragedies of poisonings."

"The curiosity of children leads to many, if not most, accidental poisonings. Children see, they touch, they taste medicine on the bedside stand, drain cleaner on the floor, furniture polish left on a table. This frequently leads to tragedy."

"I urge parents to insure that all toxic materials and medicines be kept secure from the reach of children. We don't ordinarily think of such items as aspirin and iron tablets as harmful but at the present time aspirin is the leading agent involved in household poisonings of children. Iron pills, taken by women, can be deadly poison for small children."

West also described the various service which pharmacists in the state have provided over the past several years to aid in poison prevention. They developed the now widely recognized "snake warning symbol" which is a self-education program between parent and child to identify dangerous substances in the home; the poison antidote kit (PAK) containing syrup of ipecac and activated charcoal for first aid use; a booklet "The Family Reference Guide to Poison Prevention and Treatment"; a "Safety Medicine Chest" used to secure drugs and medicines out of the reach of children; a film "Spilly Escapes Poisoning" which teaches small children some important lessons about the dangers of medicines and other household poisons through the use of an animated cartoon.

West points out that since 1970, the Poison Prevention Packaging Act has contributed substantially to reducing the number of harmful accidental intakes and subsequent injuries and fatalities among children under five. Poisoning reports for aspirin, the product most frequently involved in childhood intake and deaths has shown a decline of 43.5 percent in the years since aspirin products were first required to be in safety packages.

However, other categories have assumed a more prominent place in accidental poisoning of small children: soaps, detergents, cleansers, plants, vitamins, antihistamines, and cold medicines, perfumes, colognes, and toilet water are examples of such categories. Cold medicines and antihistamines showed the largest percentage increase of the top twenty-five categories during the past few years.

West urged parents to gain a full knowledge on what to do to prevent children accidental poisonings by consulting their local pharmacist or by contacting the Michigan Pharmaceutical Association, 1812 Michigan National Tower, Lansing, Michigan 48933.

'LATE' HIS STRATEGY Church To Toss Hat In Ring

IDAHO CITY, Idaho (AP) — Sen. Frank Church, counting on the late primaries "to leave a lasting impression on the convention," prepared today to enter the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

As he headed Wednesday for this mountain mining town of 150, Church compared himself with the turtle in the race with the hare. "Like I'm doing, he started slowly but came on strong to win," Church said.

Church picked Idaho City to enter the race for the Democratic nomination for sentimental reasons. His grandfather settled here after the Civil War. And, in 1940, his father-in-law announced his candidacy for governor of Idaho from a platform in Idaho City.

Five Democratic candidates are still in the race after four weeks of primary elections, and a sixth, California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., entered the race last week.

Of the candidates in the race, Church is closest in philosophy to Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall. And Udall already has staked claim in the leadership in what he calls the party's progressive wing.

Church, 51, said his first goal will be the Nebraska primary May 11 — after the April 8 primaries in New York and Wisconsin, which Udall has said are important to his own campaign.

Church has made it clear his strategy is based on a strong showing late in the game — and arrival at the Democratic National Convention this summer with a sizable bloc of delegates. As the long primary election campaign wears on, he has said, others are sure to run into financial trouble.

He contends his own financial footing is sound. He qualified for federal matching funds several weeks ago, and backers began a massive mailing Tuesday aimed at raising $3 million.

The wide exposure he got in his role as chairman of the Senate committee that investigated U.S. intelligence activities has been considered a key factor in his decision to run for president.

Lottery Money Unclaimed

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — About $2.5 million in unclaimed Michigan lottery prizes would be returned to the lottery prize account Oct. 1 under legislation the House passed Wednesday. The House approved the bill sponsored by Rep. Paul Rosenbaum, D-Battle Creek, 88-38. Rosenbaum said the unclaimed money, which is now in the state's general fund, will not be put in the prize fund until October so that the state can use it a while longer in a tight fiscal situation. He said the Bureau of Lottery told him that once the unclaimed prize money is returned to the prize fund, it will eventually generate twice as much revenue for the state through increased lottery ticket sales.

Hoopskirts Can Be A Problem

By HELEN HATTON

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — "There is something women should know this Bicentennial year when they consider wearing one of those pretty and feminine hoopskirts for a party. Don't — not if you're going to be riding in anything less spacious than a limousine, or better still, a truck."

I speak from firsthand experience with problems I never thought of when I rented such a flattering gown.

"This dress has a flexible hoop, so you'll have no problem driving," said the salesman. He could say that because he'd never worn one.

I first noted a problem when I whirled and started through the door. My skirt stopped me. If I dipped a bit to one side, it flipped up in a very unladylike manner on the other. If I persisted straight ahead, it bent in at the sides and bounced up in back.

Only by turning sideways could I get through the door, along the hall, or even down the stairs.

Outdoors it was wet and muddy, so I had to pick up my hoops and trailing skirts as I dashed for the car. Then, the impact of my predicament hit. The car door was much narrower than the house door, with the added impediments of a seat and steering wheel.

At that point, I had no idea where my hoops went as I twisted and maneuvered to get into my compact car. I did keep them out of the mud, twisted and flared but they seemed to gain a will of their own as I attempted to fit them and myself behind the steering wheel.

When seated, my problems weren't over. When I reached out to close the door, the hoops billowed out to form a barrier. As I tucked that side in, the other side momentarily covered the console and gearshift. As I got that adjusted, a hoop bounced over the wheel.

Finally, all was in crumpled order. The door was closed, the wheel and shift were visible. Then, I remembered the seat belt had to be buckled or the car wouldn't start.

But, the already subdued hoops duly squeezed out a few times as I groped to buckle the belt somewhere below those coiled and springy hoops.

I made it to the party and enjoyed the compliments to the hilt, savoring what I vowed would be a once-in-a-lifetime look.

Next time I'll go as Calamity Jane.

More Drug Violations Are Charged

SOUTH HAVEN — Additional drug-related charges were filed Tuesday against a Covert man and a South Haven woman who were arrested March 9, on charges of selling heroin, according to state police from the South Haven post.

The two were Charles Jackson, 56, M-140, Covert, and Charlene Lasenby, 40, of South Haven.

Jackson was charged with an additional count of delivery (sale) of heroin and possession of heroin. He demanded a preliminary examination and his bond was raised from $200,000 to $265,000. He is now charged with three counts of selling heroin in addition to a May, 1975 arrest on a similar charge which is still pending in Van Buren Circuit court.

Miss Lasenby Tuesday was additionally charged with possession of heroin and her bond was raised from $150,000 to $160,000.

Police said the possession charges resulted from analysis of drugs found in the homes of the suspects when the two were arrested March 9. Both had demanded preliminary examinations and were held in lieu of the high bonds when arraigned by District court Judge Donald Goodwillie Jr., on the original charges.

Preliminary examinations on all charges have been scheduled for March 23 at 1 p.m.

MAINE: Home Of A Tough Breed

By LYN LILJEHOLM
PORTLAND, Maine (NEA) — Maine is the place that nonresidents think of, and flock to, in the summer. Small wonder.

The Maine Turnpike, the principal means of access into Maine from the south, is 2,200 lakes and ponds, of which one, Moosehead, is the largest body of water lying wholly within one state, and the icy ocean which has fringed Maine's coast with hundreds of inlets and tidal rivers.

Some of the bigger office buildings in the cities — and

A Portland bank ran a contest a couple of years ago with a money prize for the customer who, before the "season," could most accurately peg the time during the summer when the thermometer hit 90. There was no winner that year; the temperature never got to 90.

Non-Mainers, except for skiers who flock to Saddleback and Sunday River, Bald Mountain, Squaw Mountain and Sugarloaf, not only tend to avoid Maine in winter; they are the ones, say Mainers, who have spread the canard that Maine is an Arctic outpost in winter.

That's not precisely the fact. Maine can even have "open" winters, with a few mild two-and-three inchers, as the snow "precip" is measured. It's true that parkas, galoshes, snow-treads and shovels are a part and parcel of Maine winter, and when a warning of a howling nor'easter comes to the coast it's best to huddle down, but Maine winters tend to make hardy Mainers. And they like to contemplate the massive traffic tie-ups in other states after a "trifling" three-inch storm when Maine's own street departments and highway crews man the plows and snowblowers to clear hundreds of miles of highways overnight after a 12-inch blizzard.

Maine may be lumped in with the other five New England states but it's almost as large as the rest of them put together. It does share some of the quaintness — tidy towns and village greens, white steeped churches and ancient graveyards with weatherbeaten, leaning stones. But Maine is a wilder, untidier, more self-sufficient version of picture postcard New England.

In its bigness it is covered with vast forests — eight million acres of them — where in pre-Colonial times the tallest, straightest pines were marked for the "King's Mast," the spars for the sails of the ships of the King of England.

Its vastness covers endless Aroostook potato fields, with Wyoming-like horizons stretching into the distance. It covers New England's only really respectable mountain, mile-high Katahdin, the first spot in the U. S. where the sun hits, when its rays warm Katahdin's summit.

Mainers have always considered themselves a special breed, stubborn, hard-working, intractable, thrifty and honest. Though Maine, and particularly the populous southeastern corner, has its share of transplanted out-of-staters, it's still a mark of one-upmanship to be native-born. A small town newspaper several years ago ran the obituary of an 83-year-old lady, conceding though "not born in Maine" she had, through her industry and good works, been an asset to civic and social groups. The lady in question had come to Maine at the age of three months!

Maine has a history going back nearly 1,000 years. It is thought to be the "Vikland" the Vikings landed on. It was the scene of Indian raids, burning, pillaging and scalping — on both sides. It saw King Philip's War a century before the Revolution, the French and Indian War and in 1776 the British were lobbing cannonballs into Portland from Casco Bay. Portland refused to comply with the British demands that all firearms and cannon be turned over to the invaders and for its Yankee intractability was burned to the ground. But Maine, profligate in history, has been careless of it: A Maine State Museum was officially opened only two years ago.

clugged with the cars, kids and campers of out-of-staters escaping the broiling heat of the eastern seaboard and points beyond. Enticing them is the cool water of 5,100 rivers and brooks where the trout and the landlocked salmon dart; the Maine's cities don't tend to be overlarge — have air conditioning but most Mainers feel this is just to show the tourists that they can be as up-to-date as anybody. Who needs air conditioning in a summer that hovers around 70 degrees?

PINE TREE STATE

Area: 33,213 sq. mi.; rank, 39th. Population (U.S. est. 1974): 1,047,000; rank, 38th. Capital: Augusta. Motto: Dirigo, I Direct. Flower: Pine cone and tassel. Bird: Chickadee. Tree: Eastern white pine. Song: State of Maine Song. Entered Union: Mar. 15, 1820; rank, 23d. Nickname: Pine Tree State.

Maine's rocky coast was explored by John and Sebastian Cabot, 1498-99. French settlers arrived, 1604, at the St. Croix River; English, 1607, on the Kennebec. In 1691, Maine was made part of Massachusetts. Joining that colony's protests against Britain, Maine staged its own tea party at York. In the Revolution, a Maine regiment fought at Bunker Hill; a British fleet destroyed Falmouth (now Portland), 1775; but the British ship Margareta was captured near Machiasport. In 1820, Maine broke off from Massachusetts, became a separate state.

JOHN P. ROCHE
A Word at a Time

Gen. George McClellan, Lincoln's commander of the Army of the Potomac, had one big problem: He always went into battle convinced he would lose. He did.

This vignette came to mind as I was meditating on Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's difficulties. Kissinger has a "Gutterdammerung Complex," that is, he has given up on the West and sees defeat in the cards, as if only a matter of time. Thus he sees his role as one of slaving off our collapse as long as possible, and — since he has no faith in the ultimate wisdom of the people — this requires all sorts of devious shell games designed to free our policy from the stupidity of the masses and their elected representatives.

Paradoxically, this has precisely the wrong impact. If the President and Secretary of State had gone to the American people once it became clear that the Soviets were injecting a Cuban Foreign Legion into Angola and laid it on the line, I suspect the reaction in Congress might have been quite different.

One of the problems with Vietnam was its location at the end of the world; Cuba, and Cuban imperialism abetted with Soviet hardware, is something else. After all, it's "90 miles from Florida" and the thought of Cuban legionnaires prowling around Latin America with 122mm rocket consoles, T-54 tanks and nasty one-man anti-aircraft missiles is likely to snap a significant number of Americans out of their post-Indochina hangover.

Instead of that, all kinds of three-way handoffs were designed to get insufficient equipment to the anti-Soviet forces in Angola, and by the time most of us woke up the ball game was virtually over.

There is an additional dimension to the Kissinger's "Gutterdammerung Complex": It generates a malaise in all who encounter it.

In my considered historical judgment, if we play our cards right, we can count on totalitarian enemies to make bigger mistakes than we do. In the immediate contest, this means an offensive detente platoon working out a political warfare strategy that plays on the structural and ideological weaknesses of the USSR (e.g., the nationalities question) and the Soviet bloc (e.g., the divisive issues raised at the recent Soviet Party Congress). It also means meeting the military challenge head-on with a build-up of forces to match the geometric growth in the USSR over the past decade. Finally, we need a general like Grant, who when asked if a battle should be postponed because of rain, replied, "It's raining on Lee too — hit them."

Senator's 'Suspicious'

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Pentagon may be using the threat of shutting Kincheloe Air Force Base to "coerce" Michigan into accepting Project Seafarer, a state senator charged Tuesday.

In a letter to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, Sen. Robert Davis, R-Gaylord, said he became suspicious "right away" when Kincheloe was included last week in a list of three Air Force bases which may be closed.

A Defense Department spokesman in Washington immediately denied the charge, saying there was no relation between the decision over Kincheloe and the reluctance of Michigan to accept the massive Seafarer underground communications grid.

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURES Part Of Ethics Act Delayed

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A circuit court judge Wednesday blocked enforcement of sections of Michigan's new political ethics law until sometime in May.

Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Donald Reisig said he extended an injunction against parts of the law — which takes effect April 1 — because there was no way it could be complied with immediately.

The sections involved are provisions which require disclosure of financial interests by public officials and candidates, and registration and reporting requirements on lobbyists.

Under the new law, both groups must file forms and obtain information and guidance from the Political Ethics Commission, also established under the new law.

But the commission cannot begin work until April 1, and is not expected to be ready to function for weeks thereafter. Thus, Reisig said, officials and lobbyists would be caught in a legal situation where they would be required to file information but have no forms nor anybody to file them with.

Reisig's order extends an injunction against enforcement of the provisions until 40 days after the commission is appointed by Gov. William Milliken — probably at the end of the month. State officials have said enforcement of the law's provisions isn't likely until fall anyway.

The law also regulates campaign spending and contributions and provides for partial public funding of gubernatorial campaigns.

The legislature attempted to put the political ethics commission to work Jan. 1, but the attorney general ruled its action was unconstitutional and said it is not in effect until April 1.

Several groups have filed suit before Reisig challenging the constitutionality of the new law, especially the financial disclosure and lobbyist regulation provisions. They include school and college officials and lobbying groups, as well as a broadcasting association which is challenging the prohibition against disclosure of complaints filed with the ethics committee.

Meanwhile, the state Supreme Court is also considering the law's constitutionality.

HAPPY FACE: Somebody asked Vice President Nelson Rockefeller Wednesday in Chicago what he'd been doing lately — and this was the immediate reply. After laughter subsided, the vice president explained he's been making speeches here and there. Lecturers shield him up to neck. (AP Wirephoto)

House Panel Balks On Bill Stretching Fiscal Year

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee rejected a key budget-balancing bill Wednesday but did not hammer in the final nail that would kill the measure.

The committee voted 9-5 against reporting out a measure extending Michigan's fiscal year by 90 days to Oct. 1. The bill is one of three bills Gov. William Milliken says he needs to wipe out a $280 million deficit in the 1975-1976 budget.

The vote came only after committee members voted 8-6 to delay further consideration of the bill until the Department of Management and Budget reveals supplemental appropriation bills detailing how the state will spend its money during that proposed extra quarter.

Committee rules required at least nine votes for that motion to prevail. Some of those voting against reporting the bill out said they felt more information is needed before final action is taken.

Committee members also want to verify Budget Director Gerald Miller's claim that the extra quarter will give the state at least $90 million to use to help wipe out the deficit.

If the bill is not passed, he told the committee, and the fiscal year remains the same, there will have to be more cuts in this year's budget. The governor already has cut spending by $124 million. And Miller said that if the fiscal-year extension is not approved, $70 million to $80 million will somehow have to be chopped out of Milliken's proposed $3.27 billion budget for 1976-1977.

Milliken now describes that budget as a barebones package. Under the bill, the 1978-79 fiscal year would run from Oct. 1 through June 30; thereafter it would run on the current July 1-June 30 schedule.

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURES

Part Of Ethics Act Delayed

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A circuit court judge Wednesday blocked enforcement of sections of Michigan's new political ethics law until sometime in May.

Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Donald Reisig said he extended an injunction against parts of the law — which takes effect April 1 — because there was no way it could be complied with immediately.

The sections involved are provisions which require disclosure of financial interests by public officials and candidates, and registration and reporting requirements on lobbyists.

Under the new law, both groups must file forms and obtain information and guidance from the Political Ethics Commission, also established under the new law.

But the commission cannot begin work until April 1, and is not expected to be ready to function for weeks thereafter. Thus, Reisig said, officials and lobbyists would be caught in a legal situation where they would be required to file information but have no forum nor anybody to file them with.

Reisig's order extends an injunction against enforcement of the provisions until 40 days after the commission is appointed by Gov. William Milliken — probably at the end of the month. State officials have said enforcement of the law's provisions isn't likely until fall anyway.

The law also regulates campaign spending and contributions and provides for partial public funding of gubernatorial campaigns.

The legislature attempted to put the political ethics commission to work Jan. 1, but the attorney general ruled its action was unconstitutional and said it is not in effect until April 1.

Several groups have filed suit before Reisig challenging the constitutionality of the new law, especially the financial disclosure and lobbyist regulation provisions. They include school and college officials and lobbying groups, as well as a broadcasting association which is challenging the prohibition against disclosure of complaints filed with the ethics committee.

Meanwhile, the state Supreme Court is also considering the law's constitutionality.

House Panel Balks On Bill Stretching Fiscal Year

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee rejected a key budget-balancing bill Wednesday but did not hammer in the final nail that would kill the measure.

The committee voted 8-5 against reporting out a measure extending Michigan's fiscal year by 90 days to Oct. 1. The bill is one of three bills Gov. William Milliken says he needs to wipe out a $280 million deficit in the 1975-1976 budget.

The vote came only after committee members voted 8-6 in delay further consideration of the bill until the Department of Management and Budget reveals supplemental appropriation bills detailing how the state will spend its money during that proposed extra quarter.

Committee rules required at least nine votes for that motion to prevail. Some of those voting against reporting the bill out said they felt more information is needed before final action is taken.

Committee members also want to verify Budget Director Gerald Miller's claim that the extra quarter will give the state at least $90 million to use to help wipe out the deficit.

If the bill is not passed, he told the committee, and the fiscal year remains the same, there will have to be more cuts in this year's budget. The governor already has cut spending by $124 million. And Miller said that if the fiscal-year extension is not approved, $70 million to $80 million will somehow have to be chopped out of Milliken's proposed $3.27 billion budget for 1976-1977. Milliken now describes that budget as a barebones package.

Under the bill, the 1978-79 fiscal year would run from Oct. 1 through June 30; thereafter it would run on the current July 1-June 30 schedule.

MOST CLUBS BEGIN DRILLS TODAY

Kuhn Orders Camps Open

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Play ball!

That familiar cry of spring was finally sounded by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Wednesday night and seconded by players union boss Marvin Miller, and if today's official start of spring training is some 2½ weeks late, the scheduled April 8 opening of the regular season seems assured.

From Florida to California, the 24 major league teams prepared to go to work in earnest today with only three weeks to prepare for the start of the game which seems in danger of being replaced by the so-called national pastime by court battles and labor disputes.

Thanks to Kuhn's dramatic decree ordering the owners to open the training camps "without further delay," baseball today comes out of the smoky, rhetoric-filled labor-management meeting rooms and into the sunlight where it belongs.

Most teams were expected to begin serious workouts today and at least one club official said the short-circuited exhibition season could get under way as soon as Sunday.

"I think this is a constructive step," Miller said when he returned to his New York home from Tampa, Fla., late Wednesday night and was informed of Kuhn's order.

Asked if this meant the season would open as scheduled April 8 with Houston at Cincinnati in the National League and New York at Milwaukee in the American, Miller replied:

"I think so. There's been no threat of a strike by the players. The whole thing has been an owners' lockout."

Kuhn's action came several hours after the executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association, meeting in Tampa, again urged the opening of the camps and the resumption of the stalemated contract negotiations with the owners.

At the same time, the executive board declined to either accept or reject the owners' "best and final" contract offer of Monday.

However, a spokesman for Kuhn said the commissioner had made up his mind before Miller informed the owners' player relations committee of his executive board's decision ... or non-decision.

"While nobody is more disappointed than I that we do not have solid progress to a final agreement, the fans are the most important people around and their interests now become paramount," Kuhn said. "Opening the season on time is what they want."

Calvin Griffith, owner of the Minnesota Twins, said he hoped his team could play its first exhibition game Sunday against the Boston Red Sox.

"This isn't as much time as I would like to have, naturally," said Manager Darrell Johnson of the American League champion Red Sox, who open the season April 9. "The regulars will need about 2½ weeks to get ready, but most of the pitchers will need more time. But we can overcome that just by being careful with them at the start of the season."

Johnson said he won't let any pitcher go more than five innings when the regular season begins and will use three or four pitchers a game "until their arms are as strong as they normally would be at that time of the year. I won't rush anybody for fear of injuries, but we'll get our work done."

At least one manager, Danny Ozark of the Philadelphia Phillies, was considering sprint drills and intrasquad game during the day and basic fundamental drills at night until the exhibition games begin to make up for lost time.

General Manager Phil Seghi of the Cleveland Indians felt the three weeks was plenty of time to prepare for the season.

"Are you kidding?" he said. "Certainly it's enough time. The only reason spring training starts so early is because of tradition. Years ago, teams used to break camp early and barnstorm northward during the last week or two playing exhibition games. But we don't do that any more so three weeks is plenty of time."

However, it likely will take more than three weeks to settle the dispute that led to the owners' refusing to open the training camps as scheduled March 1. Another owners' meeting is scheduled here Saturday.

The players' executive board asked that the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service be brought into the negotiations. The players' representatives also requested that the basic agreement, which has expired, be extended until a new contract can be worked out and that the no-strike, no-lockout provision be reinstated.

The owners were stunned Tuesday when Miller announced his personal rejection of their latest offer which contained the "one-and-one" concession which would have made any major leaguer a free agent by playing out one option year after the expiration of his signed contract. Many would have become free agents at the end of the 1976 season and virtually all by the end of the 1977 campaign.

But Miller and many player representatives were dissatisfied because the proposal would have allowed free agents to negotiate with a maximum of eight teams while the arbitrator's decision in the historic Messersmith-McNally case last December gave pitcher Andy Messersmith of the Los Angeles Dodgers the right to deal with all 24 clubs.

Miller was asked Wednesday why the executive board did not take a vote on the issue, as expected.

"The document (owners' proposal) is incomplete," he explained. "It left too many open issues to be discussed. There was nothing to vote on. We considered the owners' proposal carefully and found it reflects considerable progress. But additional work is required by negotiation. In the interim, there is no justification for the training camp lockout."

Although the owners had insisted they would not change "one colon, not one semicolon," from their Monday contract offer, owner Brad Corbett of the Texas Rangers said he felt the opening of the camps would increase the chances of reaching a settlement.

"We will be in a better position to talk to the players," he said. "We can communicate better with them and talk to them in more effective ways."

Broncos Face Powerful Marquette Tonight

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Giving anything away to the UCLA Bruins can be costly. Giving them the homecourt advantage can be fatal.

The perennial NCAA basketball champions appear on the threshold of another West Regional title this year, given the odds of a relatively weak field and the surroundings of cozy Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles.

The fifth-ranked Bruins, who won 98 straight games at Pauley before a loss to Oregon late this season, are heavily favored against Pepperdine tonight in one of two West semifinal games. Nevada-Las Vegas takes on Arizona in the other.

"I'm happy to be home," said UCLA Coach Gene Bartow, whose Bruins took the Pacific-8 Conference title and won their way into the regional semis with an opening-round victory over San Diego State last Saturday.

The Bruins, perhaps not as strong as in previous seasons when they won 10 national championships in 12 years, will have an easier time getting out of the West than other teams in the far-flung NCAA playoffs.

The most powerful of the fields will be in the Midwest Regionals at Baton Rouge, La., where Indiana plays Alabama and Marquette faces Western Michigan. All four teams are ranked in the nation's Top Ten — No. 1 Indiana, No. 2 Marquette, No. 6 Alabama and No. 10 Western Michigan.

In the East, undefeated Rutgers, 29-0, seems to be the class of the field. The fourth-ranked Scarlet Knights play Connecticut and DePaul meets VMI at Greensboro, N.C.

Rutgers, incidentally, can have the best single-season record in NCAA history by winning the national championship. If the surprising team from New Brunswick, N.J., goes all the way, the Scarlet Knights will wind up with a 33-0 record, or one game better than North Carolina's national champions of 1957.

In the Midwest Regionals at Louisville, Ky., it's Notre Dame against Michigan and Missouri vs. Texas Tech.

An intriguing battle shapes up between two of the nation's best centers — Kent Benson of Indiana and Leon Douglas of Alabama. Both teams have speed and rebounding — so it will be power against power.

Marquette's edition this year is one of Al McGuire's best ever — a zone-breaking squad that shoots well from the outside, rebounds with authority and runs at breakneck speed. The Warriors are solid favorites over Western Michigan, a club that won the Mid-American Conference outright for the first time in more than two decades.

Notre Dame, ranked seventh in the nation, rates as a slim favorite in the Midwest. The Irish, led by Adrian Dantley, got into the regional semifinals by edging Cincinnati on a last-second basket after the Bearcats, who had all but won the game, made their costliest turnover of the season.

Michigan-ND Clash May Be Another 'One-Shot Deal'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Michigan Coach Johnny Orr may have put his finger on the flavor of this year's NCAA Midwest Region basketball tournament.

While preparing his team for last weekend's first round game with Wichita State, Orr noted "when you get down to these one-shot deals, anything can happen."

As it turned out, it was "a one-shot deal" in three of the four first round games last weekend that decided the four teams who will begin competing for the Midwest title Thursday.

Marshall Sues MSU
Over Rule Changes
'University Harassment' Charged

By MARY STEVENSON

Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Mike Marshall has sued Michigan State University and asked for a court order that would allow him once again to use a MSU building for pitching practice whenever he wants.

The suit, filed in Ingham County Circuit Court on Wednesday, claims MSU "arbitrarily" changed its rules about Marshall's use of the MSU intramural building for pitching practice. The suit says Marshall was denied due process and seeks a permanent injunction to prevent similar changes in the future.

Marshall in the lawsuit says he is the victim of "university harassment."

The lawsuit is the latest chapter in Marshall's feud with the Big Ten university over his use of its intramural building.

Just last week Marshall, 33, stood mute at his arraignment in East Lansing District Court on charges of trespassing in the building, disrupting a scheduled university activity—a tennis game—and malicious destruction of university property. He is studying for his doctorate in physiology at MSU.

Marshall contends an agreement several years ago gives him an automatic reservation time to use the hitting and pitching net in the men's intramural building, but that MSU informed him by letter last month those rules had been changed.

The university now says he must reserve space a day ahead of time like everyone else due to overcrowding in the building.

The suit filed by Marshall's attorney, Tom Downs, also asks Judge Ray Hotchkiss to:

—Issue a preliminary injunction ordering the university to restore the rules as they were.

—To force MSU to show why $400 he says he gave the university to rearrange the intramural building tennis courts has not been used to do that.

—Permanently bar the university from "arbitrarily" changing rules without due process and a "fair play" hearing.

Judge Hotchkiss scheduled an April 2 hearing at 10 a.m.

Marshall—free on bond pending a June pre-trial hearing on the university's charges—was not immediately available for comment.

MSU officials said they had not yet been notified of the suit, though one spokesman called it "the first humorous thing that's happened around here in quite a while." The school's athletic program is reeling under investigations of football irregularities and the firing Tuesday of MSU's head football and basketball coaches.

Marshall has said his pro ball career can wait until his battle with MSU officials is settled.

Marshall wants a new layout for the intramural building arena where his baseball practice interferes with tennis. Marshall contends an impartial third party should judge that design, which he says would let baseball and tennis be played in harmony.

But school officials say the plan is too expensive, and would actually reduce the tennis-playing area.

Spartans To Select New
Grid Coach By April 13

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)

A new football coach will be chosen by the start of spring practice April 13, Michigan State University President Clifford R. Wharton Jr. said Wednesday.

The selection of a replacement for Denny Stolz will be made by a committee of faculty members, Wharton and new athletic director Joseph Kearney. Stolz resigned Tuesday under pressure from Wharton.

Kearney, former athletic director at the University of Washington, will start his job at MSU April 11.

Wharton gave aspirants for both Stolz' job and that of fired basketball coach Gus Ganakas only a week to submit their applications, setting a March 25 deadline.

"Prompt action is dictated by the need for continuity and the restoration of morale in the football and basketball programs," Wharton said Wednesday.

Speculation focuses on Dick Crum of Miami of Ohio and Roy Kramer of Central Michigan University as the most likely candidates. Don James, a former University of Michigan assistant now at the University of Washington also is reportedly interested in the job but has denied MSU has contacted him.

Bill Davis, the No. 1 assistant to Stolz, said he "was definitely interested in the job," but said he was told officials want to go outside the university to hire the new coach.

Wharton set a mid-April deadline for the selection of a new head basketball coach.

Stolz was asked to resign because of new information turned up by an internal probe of MSU's football program, which has been placed on three-years probation for violating 34 National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

Wharton has not said what the new information is.

He also gave no reason Tuesday for firing Ganakas from his coaching duties. He said Ganakas will be reassigned elsewhere.

Chest Discomfort Idles Bo

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Coach Bo Schembechler has missed the first few days of Michigan's spring football practice after experiencing some discomfort in his chest several weeks ago.

Assistant coach Gary Mueller has been in charge during his absence, although Schembechler did visit his office Monday to go over practice plans.

Schembechler, 47, who had a heart attack shortly before the 1970 Rose Bowl game, recently had a tightening in his chest but did not have symptoms of another heart attack, a university spokesman said Wednesday.

"I was playing pretty hard in a paddleball game a couple weeks ago and felt a little discomfort in my chest," Schembechler said. "Doctors wanted me to undergo tests then, but the flu hit. I'll know the results in a couple weeks but right now I feel great."

He is undergoing some hospital tests. According to the U-M spokesman, Schembechler had planned to undergo hospital tests in a routine checkup even before the paddleball game.

"He did not have any symptoms of a heart attack and didn't suffer chest pains," the spokesman said. "It was a tightening of the chest."

Michigan opened its five-week spring practice Tuesday.

Kuhn Orders Camps Open

By HERSHEL NISSENSEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Play ball!

That familiar cry of spring was finally sounded by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Wednesday night and seconded by players union boss Marvin Miller, and it today's official start of spring training is some 2½ weeks late, the scheduled April 8 opening of the regular season seems assured.

From Florida to California, the 24 major league teams prepared to go to work in earnest today with only three weeks to prepare for the start of the game which seems in danger of being replaced as the so-called national pastime by court battles and labor disputes.

Thanks to Kuhn's dramatic decree ordering the owners to open the training camps "without further delay," baseball today comes out of the smoky, rhetoric-filled labor-management meeting rooms and into the sunlight where it belongs.

Most teams were expected to begin serious workouts today and at least one club official said the short-circuited exhibition season could get under way as soon as Sunday.

"I think this is a constructive step," Miller said when he returned to his New York home from Tampa, Fla., late Wednesday night and was informed of Kuhn's order.

Asked if this meant the season would open as scheduled April 8 with Houston at Cincinnati in the National League and New York at Milwaukee in the American, Miller replied:

"I think so. There's been no threat of a strike by the players. The whole thing has been an owners' lockout."

Kuhn's action came several hours after the executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association, meeting in Tampa, again urged the opening of the camps and the resumption of the stalemated contract negotiations with the owners.

At the same time, the executive board declined to either accept or reject the owners' "best and final" contract offer of Monday.

However, a spokesman for Kuhn said the commissioner had made up his mind before Miller informed the owners' player relations committee of his executive board's decision ... or non-decision.

"While nobody is more disappointed than I that we do not have solid progress to a final agreement, the fans are the most important people around and their interests now become paramount," Kuhn said.

"Opening the camps and starting the season on time is what they want."

Calvin Griffith, owner of the Minnesota Twins, said he hoped his team could play its first exhibition game Sunday against the Boston Red Sox.

"This isn't as much time as I would like to have, naturally," said Manager Darrell Johnson of the American League champion Red Sox, who open the season April 8. "The regulars will need about 2½ weeks to get ready, but most of the pitchers will need more time. But we can overcome that just by being careful with them at the start of the season."

Johnson said he won't let any pitcher go more than five innings when the regular season begins and will use three or four pitchers a game "until their arms are as strong as they normally would be at that time of the year. I won't rush anybody for fear of injuries, but we'll get our work done."

At least one manager, Danny Ozark of the Philadelphia Phillies, was considering sprint drills and intrasquad game during the day and basic fundamental drills at night until the exhibition games begin to make up for lost time.

General Manager Phil Seghi of the Cleveland Indians felt three weeks was plenty of time to prepare for the season.

"Are you kidding?" he said. "Certainly it's enough time. The only reason spring training starts so early is because of tradition. Years ago, teams used to break camp early and barnstorm northward during the last week or two playing exhibition games. But we don't do that any more so three weeks is plenty of time."

However, it likely will take more than three weeks to settle the dispute that led to the owners' refusing to open the training camps as scheduled March 1. Another owners' meeting is scheduled here Saturday.

UCLA Among NCAA Picks Broncos Face Powerful Marquette Tonight

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Giving anything away to the UCLA Bruins can be costly. Giving them the homecourt advantage can be fatal.

The perennial NCAA basketball champions appear on the threshold of another West Regional title this year, given the odds of a relatively weak field and the surroundings of cozy Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles.

The fifth-ranked Bruins, who won 98 straight games at Pauley before a loss in Oregon late this season, are heavily favored against Pepperdine tonight in one of two West semifinal games. Nevada-Las Vegas takes on Arizona in the other.

"I'm happy to be home," said UCLA Coach Gene Bartow, whose Bruins took the Pacific-8 Conference title and won their way into the regional semis with an opening-round victory over San Diego State last Saturday.

The Bruins, perhaps not as strong as in previous seasons when they won 10 national championships in 12 years, will have an easier time getting out of the West than other teams in the far-flung NCAA playoffs.

The most powerful of the fields will be in the Midwest Regionals at Baton Rouge, La., where Indiana plays Alabama and Marquette faces Western Michigan. All four teams are ranked in the nation's Top Ten — No. 1 Indiana, No. 2 Marquette, No. 6 Alabama and No. 10 Western Michigan.

In the East, undefeated Rutgers, 29-0, seems to be the class of the field. The fourth-ranked Scarlet Knights play Connecticut and DePaul meets VMI at Greensboro, N.C. Rutgers, incidentally, can have the best single-season record in NCAA history by winning the national championship. If the surprising team from New Brunswick, N.J., goes all the way, the Scarlet Knights will wind up with a 33-0 record, or one game better than North Carolina's national champions of 1957.

In the Midwest Regionals at Louisville, Ky., it's Notre Dame against Michigan and Missouri vs. Texas Tech.

An intriguing battle shapes up between two of the nation's best centers — Kent Benson of Indiana and Leon Douglas of Alabama. Both teams have speed and rebounding — so it will be power against power.

Marquette's edition this year is one of Al McGuire's best ever — a zone-breaking squad that shoots well from the outside, rebounds with authority and runs at breakneck speed. The Warriors are solid favorites over Western Michigan, a club that won the Mid-American Conference outright for the first time in more than two decades.

Notre Dame, ranked seventh in the nation, rates as a slim favorite in the Midwest. The Irish, led by Adrian Dantley, got into the regional semifinals by edging Cincinnati on a last-second basket after the Beavers, who had all but won the game, made their costliest turnover of the season.

Marshall Sues MSU Over Rule Changes 'University Harassment' Charged

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Mike Marshall has sued Michigan State University and asked for a court order that would allow him once again to use a MSU building for pitching practice whenever he wants.

The suit, filed in Ingham County Circuit Court on Wednesday, claims MSU "arbitrarily" changed its rules about Marshall's use of the MSU intramural building for pitching practice. The suit says Marshall was denied due process and seeks a permanent injunction to prevent similar changes in the future.

Marshall in the lawsuit says he is the victim of "university harassment."

The lawsuit is the latest chapter in Marshall's feud with the Big Ten university over his use of its intramural building.

Just last week Marshall, 33, stood mute at his arraignment in East Lansing District Court on charges of trespassing in the building, disrupting a scheduled university activity — a tennis game — and malicious destruction of university property. He is studying for his doctorate in physiology at MSU.

Marshall contends an agreement several years ago gives him an automatic reservation time to use the hitting and pitching net in the men's intramural building, but that MSU informed him by letter last month those rules had been changed.

The university now says he must reserve space a day ahead of time like everyone else due to overcrowding in the building.

The suit filed by Marshall's attorney, Tom Downs, also asks Judge Ray Hotchkiss to:

- Issue a preliminary injunction ordering the university to restore the rules as they were.
- To force MSU to show why $400 he says he gave the university to rearrange the intramural building tennis courts has not been used to do that.
- Permanently bar the university from "arbitrarily" changing rules without due process and a "fair play" hearing.

Judge Hotchkiss scheduled an April 2 hearing at 10 a.m.

Marshall — free on bond pending a June pre-trial hearing on the university's charges — was not immediately available for comment.

MSU officials said they had not yet been notified of the suit, though one spokesman called it "the first humorous thing that's happened around here in quite a while." The school's athletic program is reeling under investigations of football irregularities and the firing Tuesday of MSU's head football and basketball coaches.

Marshall has said his pro ball career can wait until his battle with MSU officials is settled.

Marshall wants a new layout for the intramural building arena where his baseball practice interferes with tennis. Marshall contends an impartial third party should judge that design, which he says would let baseball and tennis be played in harmony.

But school officials say the plan is too expensive, and would actually reduce the tennis-playing area.

Michigan-ND Clash May Be Another 'One-Shot Deal'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Michigan Coach Johnny Orr may have put his finger on the flavor of this year's NCAA Midwest Region basketball tournament.

While preparing his team for last weekend's first round game with Wichita State, Orr noted "when you get down to these one-shot deals, anything can happen."

As it turned out, it was "a one-shot deal" in three of the four first round games last weekend that decided the four teams who will begin competing for the Midwest title Thursday night in cavernous Freedom Hall.

Orr's ninth-ranked Wolverines, 22-6, needed a 20-foot jumper from Rickey Green in the last six seconds to edge Wichita State and gain a berth opposite seventh-ranked Notre Dame, 23-5, in Thursday's second game.

Notre Dame got there, barely, when Toby Knight tipped in a missed shot with a second left to play as the Irish edged Cincinnati, 79-78.

"Notre Dame has tremendous players," said Orr. "They're big and strong. Our speed and balance will have to offset that. We have to hold our own on the boards against Notre Dame's great size."

"So far we've held our own against some big odds and hopefully we'll do it Thursday."

I've never seen our players as enthusiastic and happy as they were after the Wichita State game."

The first game Thursday will match No. 14 Missouri, 25-4, which shaded favored Washington, 68-67, on Jim Kennedy's two free throws inside the last minute, and 18th-rated Texas Tech, 25-5, a 69-56 winner over Syracuse.

Thursday's winners will meet Saturday at noon for the region title and a spot in the NCAA finals at Philadelphia.

CMU Splits Twin Bill

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Central Michigan split a baseball doubleheader with Texas Christian University here Wednesday, winning the first game 8-2 behind an eight-hitter by John Lozen and dropping the nightcap 6-4.

Terry Lynch had two runs batted in for Central Michigan in the opener. Lozen struck out six in posting his first victory of the season without a loss.

Gene Burton, Steve Wilkerson and Tom Riordan each had two hits in the second game won by TCU. Mick Cochran homered for Central Michigan with one man on in the fourth inning.

Randy Owens, 1-0, was the winning pitcher.

"The document (owners' proposal) is incomplete," he explained. "It left too many open issues to be discussed. There was nothing to vote on. We considered the owners' proposal carefully and found it reflects considerable progress. But additional work is required by negotiation. In the interim, there is no justification for the training camp lockout."

Although the owners had insisted they would not change "one column, not one sentence," from their Monday contract offer, owner Brad Corbett of the Texas Rangers said he felt the opening of the camps would increase the chances of reaching a settlement.

"We will be in a better position to talk to the players," he said. "We can communicate better with them and talk to them in more effective ways."

Spartans To Select New Grid Coach By April 13

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A new football coach will be chosen by the start of spring practice April 13, Michigan State University President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. said Wednesday.

The selection of a replacement for Denny Stolz will be made by a committee of faculty members, Wharton and new athletic director Joseph Kearney. Stolz resigned Tuesday under pressure from Wharton.

Kearney, former athletic director at the University of Washington, will start his job at MSU April 1.

Wharton gave aspirants for both Stolz' job and that of fired basketball coach Gus Ganakas only a week to submit their applications, setting a March 25 deadline.

"Prompt action is dictated by the need for continuity and the restoration of morale in the football and basketball programs," Wharton said Wednesday.

Speculation focuses on Dick Crum of Miami of Ohio and Roy Kramer of Central Michigan University as the most likely candidates. Don James, a former University of Michigan assistant now at the University of Washington also is reportedly interested in the job but has denied MSU has contacted him.

Bill Davis, the No. 1 assistant to Stolz, said he "was definitely interested in the job," but said he was told officials want to go outside the university to hire the new coach.

Wharton set a mid-April deadline for the selection of a new head basketball coach.

Stolz was asked to resign because of new information turned up by an internal probe of MSU's football program, which has been placed on three-years probation for violating 34 National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

Wharton has not said what the new information is.

He also gave no reason Tuesday for firing Ganakas from his coaching duties. He said Ganakas will be reassigned elsewhere.

Chest Discomfort Idles Bo

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Coach Bo Schembechler has missed the first few days of Michigan's spring football practice after experiencing some discomfort in his chest several weeks ago.

Assistant coach Gary Moeller has been in charge during his absence, although Schembechler did visit his office Monday to go over practice plans.

Schembechler, 47, who had a heart attack shortly before the 1970 Rose Bowl game, recently had a lightening in his chest but did not have symptoms of another heart attack, a university spokesman said Wednesday.

"I was playing pretty hard in a paddleball game a couple weeks ago and felt a little discomfort in my chest," Schembechler said. "Doctors wanted me to undergo tests then, but the flu hit. I'll know the results in a couple weeks but right now I feel great."

He is undergoing some hospital tests. According to the U-M spokesman, Schembechler had planned to undergo hospital tests in a routine checkup even before the paddleball game.

"He did not have any symptoms of a heart attack and didn't suffer chest pains," the spokesman said. "It was a tightening of the chest."

Michigan opened its five-week spring practice Tuesday.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Abe Gibrón of The Tampa Bay Buccaneers has been changed from defensive line coach to defensive coordinator for the new National Football League team.

Hawks' Comeback Nips Maple Leafs

From Associated Press
For an agonizing moment, the action was frozen.
Toronto goaltender Wayne Thomas had done his job, lunging into a point-blank shot by Chicago's Pat Martin.

The puck trickled toward the net, seven inches, six inches, five inches away from the goal line.
The score of the National Hockey League game was tied 3-3 with the clock running down. Six minutes, five minutes, 4 1/2 minutes to go as the puck sat there. Thomas looked at it, Martin looked at it, 13,700 pairs of eyes in Chicago Stadium looked at it.

A final lunge by Martin, whose stick grazed the puck with the tenderness of a mother embracing her child.

Goal.
The 6-5 Chicago victory, capped by Martin's tap-in, was anything but a surprise to Maple Leafs Coach Rod Kelly. "My defense turned into Jim-burger cheese in the final period," when the Black Hawks mounted a three-goal rally in win.

"It was a case where we weren't even trying and they were skating through us," said Kelly. The Black Hawks trailed 4-1 early in the middle period, fought within 4-3, then tied it 3-3 with two goals within just over a minute early in the final session.

In the other NHL games,

Buffalo trimmed California 5-3 and the New York Rangers topped Minnesota 3-1.

First-period goals by Pat Hickey and Rod Gilbert sent the Rangers to their second victory in 12 games and handed the North Stars their eighth loss in nine. Former Olympian Steve Jensen tallied for Minnesota, while Ron Greshner also scored for New York.

Danny Gare scored a goal and set up two others in leading Buffalo past California. Jocelyn Guevremont, Craig Ramsay, Don Luce and Gil Perreault also tallied for the Sabres; Al MacAdam, Jim Moxey and Bob Murdoch hit for the Seals.

Crippled Knicks Top Jazz

Carter, Collins Generate 76ers Over Bulls

From Associated Press
Apparently it only takes a couple of days for the New Orleans Jazz to forget most of their basketball lessons.

"We won five games in six nights and should have been fired. Then we have two days off and come out like pussycats," Coach Butch van Breda Kolff snorted after the Jazz dropped a 112-107 National Basketball Association decision to the crippled New York Knicks Wednesday night.

"We just can't stand prosperity. Instead of remembering how we win, we revert back to the same bad habits and the same bad shots. I keep telling them you can't shoot your way back into the game — you have to play your way back into the game."

John Ginnelli scored 24 points and grabbed 13 rebounds in dominating three New Orleans centers and pacing the Knicks, who played without All-Star guard Walt Frazier, hospitalized with a sore back. Pete Maravich led the Jazz with 22 points.

Elsewhere, the Milwaukee Bucks whipped the Los Angeles Lakers 103-96, the Philadelphia 76ers downed the Chicago Bulls 108-101, the Seattle SuperSonics trimmed the Buffalo Braves 122-111 and the Houston Rockets trounced the Atlanta Hawks 124-112.

Gary Brokaw got hot in the third quarter to lead Milwaukee. Scoreless in the first half, Brokaw delivered nine points in a 2 1/2-minute segment, helping the Bucks convert a 88-65 deficit to a 78-73 lead. Brokaw added five more points and Dave Meyers scored 10 of his 14 in the final period.

The Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, hampered by foul trouble, finished with 21 points, only eight in the second half. Milwaukee center Elmore Smith led all scorers with 22.

Doug Collins' lay-up gave the 76ers a 75-74 lead late in the third period and George McGinnis' shooting helped them widen the lead in the fourth quarter. Fred Carter led the 76ers with 24 points and Collins had 21. Chicago's Mickey Johnson topped all scorers with 29.

Seattle climbed into a share of second place in the Pacific Division despite a season-high 32 points by Buffalo center Bob McAdoo, matching his career best. Seattle trailed 100-95 with 5:37 remaining but guard Slick Watts, second in the league in assists, began to penetrate Buffalo's defense and Seattle gained a 101-100 lead. Seattle was led by Fred Brown's 37 points.

Houston broke a 110-110 tie late in the game with 12 straight points. The Rockets' led six players in double figures, led by Rudy Tomjanovich with 24 points.

Denver Edges Past Indiana With Miraculous Late Rally

From Associated Press
"Hubby Leonard couldn't think of anything good to say after watching his Indiana Pacers blow an 18-point lead at home. So he didn't say anything."

While Leonard refused to talk to reporters, Denver Coach Larry Brown said enough for both of them.

"This has got to be the greatest comeback I've ever seen," Brown noted after his Denver Nuggets staged a miraculous rally to beat the Pacers 111-108 Wednesday night in the American Basketball Association.

"It was really something else. When the Pacers were down by three with 28 seconds to go, I knew they would take the three-point shot. But I never believed they would get three of them wide open like they did." The Pacers, fighting to hold onto the fifth and last playoff spot, held a 54-36 advantage midway through the second period and led 98-88 after three periods. But then the Nuggets, led by David Thompson, outscored the Pacers 25-10 in the final period.

"I thought in the fourth quarter we changed our tempo a notch and we played awfully well," said Brown. "Anytime you outscore a team 25-10, you played super defense."

In the other ABA games, the Kentucky Colonels, whipped the Virginia Squires 139-115 and the New York Nets stopped the Spirits of St. Louis 96-90.

Thompson, usually a forward, started at guard for the first time this season because of Denver injuries and scored 36 points for the Nuggets. Claude Terry's basket with three minutes remaining gave Denver its first lead since the opening period, 105-104, and Thompson scored four points in the final two minutes, helping the Nuggets in the victory. The Pacers missed three three-point shots in the final 15 seconds of the game as they lost their 17th home game this year.

Reserve Jim McDaniels had one of his best games of the season, scoring 21 points, as Kentucky beat Virginia. McDaniels, a journeyman center who has played for several teams in both the ABA and the National Basketball Association, played 22 minutes as a backup for Artis Gilmore, who scored 27 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Julius Erving scored 34 points and Bill Melchioni stabilized New York's floor game in the second half, leading the Nets over St. Louis. The victory by the Nets, their seventh in 11 games over St. Louis, foiled an effort by the Spirits to close in on fifth-place Indiana.

Port Huron Slaps Columbus

From Associated Press
Danny Newman slapped in four goals to spearhead Port Huron to a 7-4 International Hockey League triumph over Columbus Wednesday night.

The victory improved the Flashes' second-place standing in the Northern Division with a 34-26-11 record. Columbus, in the Southern Division Division cellar, now is 23-44-7.

In Dayton, Bill Riley scored his 29th and 30th goals of the season to pace Dayton to a 3-1 triumph over Toledo.

The Southern Division leading Gems were ahead all the way while upping their record to 42-21-10. Third-place Toledo now is 24-34-13.

Gets New Trial Carter Demanding Release From Jail

By CARL ZEITZ
Associated Press Writer
TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Former middleweight boxing contender Rubin "Hurricane" Carter says nine years in prison is enough and he should be released immediately — now that the New Jersey Supreme Court has overturned his triple murder conviction.

"If I am bitter, then I have a right to be bitter," Carter declared at a news conference Wednesday at the Clinton State Prison. He had just learned of the high court's order granting Carter and codefendant John Artis a new trial.

In a unanimous 7 to 0 ruling, the court said Carter, 38, and Artis, 30, were denied a fair trial because the prosecution did not reveal promises of leniency it gave to two key witnesses whose testimony placed the defendants at the murder scene.

Immediately after the court announced its decision, Burrell Ives Humphreys, the Passaic County prosecutor, said Carter and Artis would be retried for the fatal shooting of three persons in a Paterson, N.J., tavern June 17, 1966.

Myron Beldock, Carter's attorney, said a bail hearing has been scheduled next Wednesday in Paterson. With the court's ruling, Beldock said Carter and Artis should be presumed innocent and released, Carter from Clinton and Artis from Leesburg State Prison.

Carter called on Gov. Brendan T. Byrne to release him immediately by executive order. An aide to Byrne said the governor considered the bail question and Carter's possible release from jail "clearly within the province of the courts." The governor is a former judge.

"Regardless of the opinion of the state's highest court, I am in prison illegally," Carter told reporters. "What you are seeing is a person who has been raped for 9½ years for crimes I did not, would not and could not commit."

If he is retried, Carter said, he would be found innocent.

Wednesday's ruling was the second in the Carter-Artis case. The court had upheld the convictions in 1969.

In reversing its position, the court said prosecution promises to the two witnesses, Arthur D. Bradley and Alfred Bello, made at the time Carter and Artis were arrested but not revealed until 1974, should have been disclosed at the May 1967 trial.

The panel said, "The withholding of material evidence favorable to a defendant is a denial of due process," adding that when the credibility of a prosecution witness may help determine guilt or innocence "the jury is entitled to know."

The ruling focused on evidence that showed Bello and Bradley, facing criminal charges themselves in 1967, had been promised protection against possible retaliation for testifying against Carter and Artis. Bello was also promised that the prosecution would not act against him in two potential criminal cases.

At the time of his arrest, Carter was a black civil rights activist in Paterson, and he and Artis claimed they were framed because of racial animosities. Carter said Wednesday he thinks attitudes have changed and race would play no role in a new trial.

Carter had a shot at the middleweight championship in 1964 but lost to the titleholder, Joey Giardello.

NFL Renewing Contract Talks

New Clocks, Microphones Added To Help Fans

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dick Anderson, president of the National Football League Players Association, met with the club owners today in a renewed effort to reach contractual agreement.

Anderson, defensive back for the Miami Dolphins, asked to make the appearance before the annual meeting of the NFL to discuss issues. Owners and players have not had a master contract for two years as disagreements continue over several issues.

In the impasse, the owners have ceased contributing to the players' pension fund and action has centered in the courts where players have achieved verdicts against the so-called Rozelle compensation rule.

Under its terms, a team which loses a player who plays out the option year of his contract and signs with another team is granted compensation from the signing club.

The rule is named for NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who awards the compensation. Players have argued they should be free to make individual deals when they play out their options.

During the coming season, referees throughout the league will be equipped with radio microphones for explaining their calls to fans in the stadium.

Use of the radio communication was done on an experimental basis at some games late in the 1975 series.

The owners on Wednesday voted three changes in the playing rules.

The official coin toss will be held three minutes before kickoff with the referee and team captains present. The toss will be live on the referee's microphone so fans will hear the dialogue from midfield.

In another move designed to aid the fans, the NFL will have time clocks in each end zone to show the 30 seconds in which an offensive team must get a play under way.

The clocks, four feet high and six feet wide with three foot numbers, will be the official timing device for the offensive team getting the ball in play. However, the field judge still will have the responsibility for timing including keeping the time manually in case of a malfunction.

The proposal to widen the playing field was tabled.

Rejected again was a proposal that a pass receiver need have only one foot in bounds for a legal catch. The NFL requires both feet be in bounds.

49ers Chase NIT Rainbow

Battle Of Carolina Tops Tourney Semifinals

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the solid gold shows in New York these days is "The Wiz," a modern version of that old movie classic, "The Wizard of Oz."

The story involves a girl who is swept away in a root-lifting Kansas twister and finds herself in an odd, picturesque land chasing a rainbow and finding a magical wizard who makes her dreams come true.

If there's anything symbolic attached to it, the North Carolina-Charlotte basketball team went to see it Wednesday night. The 49ers are chasing rainbows, too — in the National Invitation Tournament title.

"This has been a dream come true for me," said Lee Rose, whose 49ers meet North Carolina State tonight in an NIT semifinal game. "I'm so shook up I can't eat."

After Providence and Kentucky play the opener of the semifinal doubleheader at Madison Square Garden, the Carolina neighbors will have their Civil War.

"It's really nothing personal, but I'd rather play anyone else in the world than North Carolina-Charlotte right now," said North Carolina State Coach Norm Sloan. "There's no way we can match their emotion. It isn't enough that UNC-Charlotte is a great team, that they're trying to make a name for themselves and that they want revenge from a loss to us earlier in the season. Now, their coach's wife wants the NIT championship for an anniversary present."

Sloan's remark, delivered deadpan at a press conference Wednesday, was in reference to a remark made kiddingly by Rose. The 49ers' coach joked that he had to win, "or my marriage would be dissolved. She wants the NIT for our anniversary present."

The game has significant meaning for UNC-Charlotte. The 49ers have lived for some time in the shadow of North Carolina State's gaudy Atlantic Coast Conference — and life there hasn't been easy, according to Rose.

"It's been tough building a basketball program with those ACC teams around," Rose said. "You've seen our team — we don't have much depth. All we have is a lot of heart."

"They're a great basketball team," said Sloan. "No wonder, most of the ACC teams don't want to play them."

Before they stage the Battle of the Carolinas, the opener will feature an intriguing difference in philosophies — Kentucky's inside power game against Providence's finesse.

"Our team is playing well now," said Providence Coach Dave Gavitt.

Racers Continue New England Jinx

From Associated Press

If the New England Whalers wonder why Indianapolis is so tough for them to beat this season, they can find the answer in two words from Racer Coach Jacques Demers: "Hustle and togetherness."

"That's what's doing it for us," said Demers after his Racers beat the Whalers 5-2 in the World Hockey Association Wednesday night.

The victory was Indianapolis' fifth in eight games with New England this season. There have been two ties.

"We have four more games with New England and I'd have to say we have the advantage," said Demers, whose club moved within three points of first place in the East Division. "They have been wondering what they have to do to beat us."

In the other WHA games, the Cincinnati Stingers beat the Toronto Toros 5-4; the Houston Aeros whipped the Phoenix Roadrunners 7-4 and the Winnipeg Jets turned back the Calgary Cowboys 3-2.

Indianapolis erupted for three power-play goals in the first period — the first scored by Michel Parizeau — to beat New England. Parizeau's second goal broke a 1-1 tie at 12:15 of the opening frame and the Racers added another power play tally by Al Karlander to take a 3-1 lead into the intermission.

Rick Dudley netted three goals, including the winning score, leading Cincinnati over Toronto. The victory moved Cincinnati into sole possession of second place, one point behind New England and ahead of Cleveland and Indianapolis, in the Eastern Division. Toronto trails the Canadian Division.

Venerable Gordie Howe scored four goals, including a first-period hat trick, triggering Houston's victory over Phoenix. The Howe family got all but one of the Aeros' goals with sons Mark and Marty joining Gordie in the production.

Third-period goals by Mike Ford and Wally Lindstrom led Winnipeg past Calgary.

Veteran Kaat Gets Little Recognition

Top Active Hurler In Baseball

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (NEA) — James Lee Kaat would be perfect for an American Express commercial. Only in his case, they might fail to recognize the name as well as the face.

Jim Kaat has won more major league baseball games than anyone in the world actively engaged in throwing for a living. You can look it up. He has totaled 235 victories in a career which stretches back, on the zig-zag level, to 1959.

Yet he's so anonymous they didn't even have him listed among the 200 game winners in the most recent Book of Baseball Records.

You could put Jim Kaat on "To Tell the Truth" and the panel would figure him for a tulip farmer. He came out of Michigan's tulip country.

Jim Kaat needs one of those plastic identification cards at a convention of baseball players. He won 25 games for the Minnesota Twins almost a decade ago and pitched them into a World Series. He won 20 games last year for the Chicago White Sox, at the age of 38. He still needs a co-signer to pick up a prescription at the corner drug store.

When he reports to the Philadelphia Phillies for spring exercises, he will be aligned with his third major league team in four years. He's a perfect relic in Philly for the Bicentennial Year.

The fact is that at the age of 37, Jim Kaat feels it's nice to be wanted as an athlete.

"I knew that our team was in a process of change," he says in a bit of understatement, since Bill Veeck bought the White Sox this winter and set up a trading table in a hallway, "and I knew that the Phillies had scouted me last year and were looking for a lefthand pitcher."

On the last day of last season, he went to Chuck Tanner, then the manager of the Chicago White Sox, and asked to be traded to the Phillies.

He is a big (6-4½), imposing man with a strong face, big jaw and the gait of a guy who makes his living in a physical way. He is from the Dutch farm country of Michigan, where he attended Hope College and where the local hero was an old major league pitcher of Dutch descent named George Zuverink. But he was inspired to play baseball by his own father, who was a great

Connie Mack admirer.

Kaat signed for a bonus of $4,000 with the Washington Senators organization, and when they were moved to Minnesota in 1961 he was firmly placed on their pitching staff. And remained there for the next 13 years.

He feels some of the lack of attention during that period was due to his stolid personality and that, with the exception of 1966 (when he won those 25), he did not have really big years, like Sandy Koufax did.

"They don't remember it when you win 18 or 19 games a season," he says.

But there was a remarkable consistency in his pitching, even if it wasn't always appreciated. "In Minnesota," he says wryly, "winning 14 games sometimes wasn't enough."

He had to redesign his pitching style in mid-career because he tore some tendons in his left elbow that hobbled him most of three years and forced him to rely less on pure speed — "although I was never really a power pitcher" — and more on guile.

In this he was aided by Johnny Sain, a pitching coach for whom he has great respect and who imbued him with a sense of pace and style.

Going to Chicago late in 1973, he rejoined Sain, a vital factor in his resurgence with the White Sox as a 20-game winner the last couple of years.

"I don't blame Minnesota for trading me," he says. "I was 10 and 2 in '72 when I fractured my wrist sliding into second base. The next year, I just went bad."

The art of pitching has changed considerably in the 16 years he has been in the big leagues. He has experienced the phenomenon of the bullpen as a starting pitcher's greatest aid.

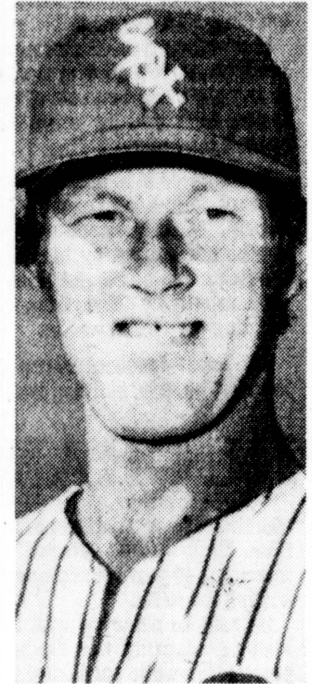

"During a game," he rationalizes, "you try to get through the batting rotation three times. But the further you go, the more the percentages increase that the hitter is going to catch up to you."

"The first time you, you catch him cold. The next time he hits the ball good, but it goes right at somebody. He's adjusted to your rhythm now. So it makes sense to go to a relief pitcher quickly."

"It's a complete change of pace when somebody like Rich Gossage (the fire-balling White Sox reliever) comes in. He can throw the ball past anybody. When I first came up to the majors, there was no way he was going to be a relief pitcher. But now the relievers can fire smoke. And I don't feel bad when they lift me for one of them."

He is a man interested in going into electronic communications — he has done some play-by-play broadcasting in the Twin Cities — or coaching. It is easy to visualize him, with his poise and articulateness, as a major league manager some time in the future.

That's if somebody remembers the name.

South Haven native Tom McDougall, a championship wrestling coach at Fremont high school, has announced his resignation.

McDougall says the reason for his resignation is to be able to devote more time to the promotion of wrestling in Michigan and nationwide. McDougall says he will continue to teach at Fremont and to serve as the school's assistant athletic director.

In seven years as head coach, McDougall's Fremont teams won 101 matches and a state championship.

McDougall's other activities include being the Michigan editor for Scholastic Wrestling News, a national magazine; co-editor and co-publisher of the Michigan Format, a wrestling newsletter, and freestyle wrestling chairman for the Amateur Athletics Union's Junior Olympics.

McDougall also referees wrestling, including matches at the college level in the Big Ten and Big Eight.

panel would figure him for a tulip farmer. He came out of Michigan's tulip country.

Jim Kaat needs one of those plastic identification cards at a convention of baseball players. He won 25 games for the Minnesota Twins almost a decade ago and pitched them into a World Series. He won 20 games last year for the Chicago White Sox, at the age of 36. He still needs a co-signer to pick up a prescription at the corner drug store.

When he reports to the Philadelphia Phillies for spring exercises, he will be aligned with his third major league team in four years. He's a perfect reliever in Philly for the Bicentennial Year.

The fact is that at the age of 37, Jim Kaat feels it's nice to be wanted as an athlete.

"I knew that our team was in a process of change," he says in a bit of understatement, since Bill Veeck bought the White Sox this winter and set up a trading table in a hallway, "and I knew that the Phillies had scouted me last year and were looking for a left-hand pitcher."

On the last day of last season, he went to Chuck Tanner, then the manager of the Chicago White Sox, and asked to be traded to the Phillies.

He is a big (6-4½), imposing man with a strong face, big jaw and the gait of a guy who makes his living in a physical way. He is from the Dutch farm country of Michigan, where he attended Hope College and where the local hero was an old major league pitcher of Dutch descent named George Zuverink. But he was inspired to play baseball by his own father, who was a great

Connie Mack admirer.

Kaat signed for a bonus of $4,000 with the Washington Senators organization, and when they were moved to Minnesota in 1961 he was firmly placed on their pitching staff. And remained there for the next 13 years.

He feels some of the lack of attention during that period was due to his stolid personality and that, with the exception of 1966 (when he won those 25), he did not have really big years, like Sandy Koufax did.

"They don't remember it when you win 18 or 19 games a season," he says.

But there was a remarkable consistency in his pitching, even if it wasn't always appreciated. "In Minnesota," he says wryly, "winning 14 games sometimes wasn't enough."

He had to redesign his pitching style in mid-career because he tore some tendons in his left elbow that hobbled him most of three years and forced him to rely less on pure speed — "although I was never really a power pitcher" — and more on guile.

In this he was aided by Johnny Sain, a pitching coach for whom he has great respect and who imbued him with a sense of pace and style.

Going to Chicago late in 1973, he rejoined Sain, a vital factor in his resurgence with the White Sox as a 20-game winner the last couple of years.

"I don't blame Minnesota for trading me," he says. "I was 10 and 2 in '72 when I fractured my wrist sliding into second base. The next year, I just went bad."

The art of pitching has changed considerably in the 16 years he has been in the big leagues. He has experienced the phenomenon of the bullpen as a starting pitcher's greatest aid.

"During a game," he rationalizes, "you try to get through the batting rotation three times. But the further you go, the more the percentage increase that the hitter is going to catch up to you."

"The first time up, you catch him cold. The next time he hits the ball good, but it goes right at somebody. He's adjusted to your rhythm now. So it makes sense to go to a relief pitcher quickly."

"It's a complete change of pace when somebody like Rich Gossage (the fireballing White Sox reliever) comes in. He can throw the ball past anybody. When I first came up to the minors, there was no way he was going to be a relief pitcher. But now the relievers can fire spikes. And I don't feel bad when they lift me for one of them."

He is a man interested in going into electronic communications — he has done some play-by-play broadcasting in the Twin Cities — or coaching. It is easy to visualize him, with his poise and articulateness, as a major league manager some time in the future.

That's if somebody remembers the name.

Michigan's Terrifying Funnel Cloud Season Kicks Off Early This Year

By JUDITH RUSKIN
Associated Press Writer
April showers may bring May flowers, but they also bring Michigan's tornado season. While the National Weather Service says a tornado can occur any month of the year, April is the prime time for major tornado development. Michigan's tornadoes usually don't begin until the end of March, but the season opened early this year with several funnel clouds last Friday.

The tornadoes, which grow out of spring thunderstorms, usually strike the southern portion of Lower Michigan and last through May and June. Richard Van Ess, of the National Weather Service in Detroit, says tornadoes form on those warm, muggy days when the air is full of moisture. Something is needed to set off the severe thunderstorms that can lead to the terrifying funnel clouds, Van Ess says. A cold front moving across the state will usually do the trick. "Warm, moist air followed by a cold front and cold air can set off severe weather activity," he says. Thunder, lightning, high winds and hail are characteristics of severe thunderstorms and usually accompany tornadoes, according to Van Ess. A tornado is marked by the dark, twisting funnel shaped cloud that emerges from the overall cloud cover. The funnel will usually rotate in a coun-terclockwise direction, with high winds circulating around it. While a thunderstorm may buffet a large area with winds up to 50 or 60 miles per hour, a tornado tears through a much smaller area with winds at speeds of 200 to 250 m.p.h. It is those extremely high winds that cause the extensive damage associated with a tornado. The National Weather Service issues two types of tornado bulletins. A tornado watch indicates there is a possibility of tornado development over a large area. A tornado warning is more serious, indicating a tornado has been spotted in a specific area. Once a tornado warning has been issued, says Bob Snider, chief meteorologist for the weather service in Detroit, there isn't much time before the funnel cloud touches down. "It's only a matter of minutes," he says. "If we can issue a warning with enough time for people to get to their basements safely then we're pretty happy."

There are several safety precautions that can be taken when a tornado strikes. Van Ess says to start before a tornado warning is even issued by finding a place in your home where you can be relatively safe if and when a funnel cloud touches down. He recommends going into the basement and staying underneath something heavy, like a work bench or large piece of furniture. Since tornadoes arrive from the south or southwest, Van Ess suggests staying in the north or northeast corner of the basement. If a house does not have a basement, Van Ess says to stay on the first floor in the center of the house. Stay away from the south, southwest and western ends of the house where the

Wolverine State Ravaged By Twisters Since Early 1800s

Michigan won't quite have a Bicentennial tornado this year, but the twisters have been carving paths of death and destruction here for well over a century. The first reported tornadoes date back to before Michigan became a state in 1837. Over the years, there have been 315 confirmed deaths because of the state's tornadoes. Weather officials say the first reported tornado in Michigan history actually occurred in a field of fallen trees 10 miles southwest of what is now downtown Toledo, Ohio, shortly before the Battle of Fallen Timbers in 1794. According to Bob Snider, chief meteorologist at the National Weather Service in Detroit, the fallen timber was a result of a tornado a few days before the Aug. 20 battle. In the battle, Gen. "Mad" Anthony Wayne defeated hostile Indian tribes, opening up the area, including Michigan, to U.S. settlers. The first tornadoes were reported in Michigan proper in 1834. In February of that year, several newspapers reported a tornado had been spotted outside of Detroit. On Oct. 18, 1834, a tornado struck Kalamazoo, destroying several buildings. It was the state's first damage report stemming from a tornado. Michigan's first killer tornado was in 1875, when two persons died during a storm in Detroit on June 27. According to a journal kept by the U.S. Signal Service Office in Detroit, both were children. One was killed when the family's home collapsed, the journal said, while the other, playing outside, "was lifted about fifty feet into the air...and dashed into the branches of a tree 200 feet distant...from which he fell lifeless." The bloodiest tornado season in Michigan history was 1953 when 127 persons were killed and another 844 injured. The twister destroyed 383 houses and 564 farm buildings and caused nearly $19 million in damages. In a 35-minute period, 116 persons were killed and another 844 injured. The twister destroyed 383 houses and 564 farm buildings and caused nearly $19 million in damages. The most tornadoes in any one year were recorded in 1974 when there were 39 funnel clouds in 19 days. Three people were killed when a tornado whipped through the Hillsdale area. Eight persons died in Windsor, Ont., the same night when the storm crossed over into Canada and ripped off the roof of a curling club, sending a wall collapsing on top of the players. Last year, the weather service reported 26 tornadoes on 14 different days. One person in Newaygo County was killed and 18 others were injured.

tornado is most likely to strike first. The inside of a broom closet or other small area without windows located in the center of the house is an ideal place to wait out a tornado, Van Ess says. Otherwise, he suggests, get under a piece of furniture to protect yourself from flying debris. If there is time, open the windows on the north or east side of the house to relieve pressure which will build up inside the building, Van Ess says. Windows on the south and west sides of the house will be broken when the tornado's winds hit the area. The tornado winds enter the house and cause a "ballooning effect," Van Ess says. The tremendous buildup of pressure can blow out the walls in the house, Van Ess warns. If you're caught outside in a car when a tornado strikes, Van Ess says, first try moving away from the storm by driving at right angles to its path.

If that fails, get out of the car and take shelter in a ditch or ravine. Cars can be tossed around by the fierce winds, making them dangerous places to sit out a storm. Position yourself between the oncoming storm and the car so as not to be in the way if the car does become a flying object. Tornadoes can cause extensive damage to trailer parks with the high winds mangling and destroying the light-weight mobile homes. Take shelter in some other, sturdier type of building, Van Ess says. If no other type of shelter is available, go to a ditch or ravine on the south and east side of the trailer park and lie down flat against the ground. In all cases it is important to protect your head from flying debris. Most tornado-related deaths are caused by blows to the head, meteorologist Snider says, usually by debris from the building the victim was in. The most frequent cause of injuries, he says, is flying glass.

SHAKESPEARE FANS NEED PROGRAM

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Next month, an unlikely arena for the works of William Shakespeare — "CBS Radio Mystery Theater" — will celebrate the bard's 412th birthday with adaptations of seven of his best-known plays. They'll be aired from April 19 through April 25 on more than 200 stations, but you won't find them listed under their original titles. The leadoff show is "Murder Most Foul," which in its day was called "Macbeth." "Julius Caesar" will be known as "The Assassination," "Hamlet" will be "Long Live the King Is Dead" and so on. While the original plot lines will remain intact, considerable compression of same has been done to fit each show to the radio series' 53-minute time limit. And parts of the dialogue will be rewritten to make Shakespeare's words more understandable to those with only a nodding acquaintance with his works. The man doing the adaptations and risking the wrath of Shakespeare purists is Ian

Martin, 63, a Scotland-born, New York-raised veteran of more than 40 years of acting and writing for radio. He said he came up with the idea of adapting the Shakespeare plays while pondering the fact that while most people study them in high school, few ever understand them because of the rich poetry, imagery and all that.

Senate Approves Bill To Limit Parties On Ballot

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A bill intended to limit the number of parties on the November general election ballot and avert the possible use of paper ballots is on its way to the House after Senate passage Wednesday.

Michigan voting machines, used by some 70 per cent of the voters, can only accommodate nine parties.

Election officials predict long lines, delays of days in determining winners and high error rates if paper ballots have to be used.

The bill also would alter the procedure by which minor parties qualify for the general election. Instead of obtaining petition signatures, the parties would have to demonstrate voter support in the August primary to advance to the general election ballot.

Under the bill, any party which obtains three tenths of one per cent of the primary vote — probably about 4,000 votes — would qualify for the general election.

Only the two major parties are guaranteed a spot on the November ballot on the basis of their performances in previous elections.

Two parties — the American Independent and the Human Rights — would be guaranteed a spot on the primary ballot on the basis of getting at least one per cent of the vote in the last general election. Other minor parties would have to obtain about 18,000 petition signatures to get their names on the August ballot.

Then, all but the two major parties would have to get three tenths of one per cent of the vote to get on the November ballot.

It would, however, be technically possible for more than nine parties to qualify for the November ballot, forcing a move to paper ballots.

The House, meanwhile, passed a bill designed to protect corporations from surprise stock takeovers. The bill, passed 102-1 and sent to the Senate, places restrictions on offers to acquire more than five per cent of stocks or shares of companies incorporated or based in Michigan.

The company wishing to purchase the stock would have to register its offer with the Department of Commerce and publicly disclose the terms of the offer. Either party involved could request a hearing before the takeover offer went into effect. Once the offer became effective, the owners of the company in question would have at least 30 days to accept it.

In other action, the House passed a bill returning about $2.5 million in unclaimed Michigan lottery prizes to the lottery prize account Oct. 1. The House approved the bill, 68-36, and sent it to the Senate.

The unclaimed money, which is now in the state's general fund, will not be put in the prize fund until October to let the state use it a while longer in a tight fiscal situation.

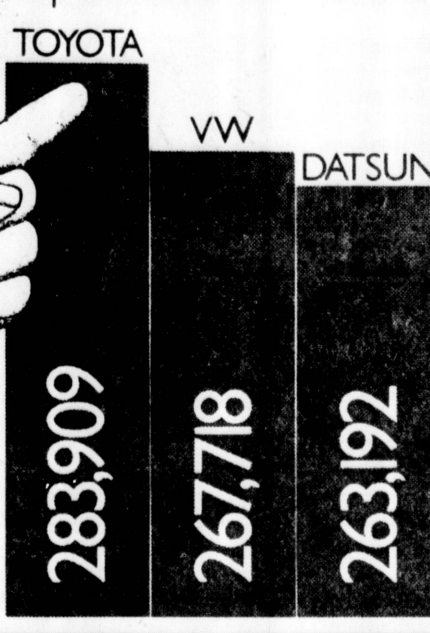

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

THE UNITED STATES might not have been born, were it not for the unwitting help of King George III and his prime minister, Lord North. Not only was Parliament dogmatic and unyielding to the political ferment in the colonies, but King George and Lord North, by their insults, threats and refusals to accept peace overtures, alienated passive colonists. As a result, the mood of rebellion spread and hardened in the colonies, The World Almanac recalls.

State Planning Third Instant Lottery Game

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Lottery officials say Michigan will get its third instant game this spring, but are keeping quiet on the details of the latest contest.

"We're starting to get it into production," said David Hanson, public relations director for the Bureau of State Lottery. "There'll be some differences, but it will be the same type of action."

The "action" in the preceding two games — both successful according to lottery standards — has been rubbing the surface off boxes on a card to determine if you're a winner.

The number of boxes may be increased the next time around, but there won't be any cars offered as prizes, although other new prizes will be offered, said

Lottery Commissioner Gus Harrison.

The details of the game will be announced April 5, officials said. The game will be ready for play in mid-April.

The cards will still offer cash awards ranging from $2 to $10,000 plus the "finalist" chance at $1 million. There may be slightly more winning tickets this time, too.

The first game began last Oct. 7 and sold 53 million tickets in about seven weeks. It offered cash prizes only.

The current instant game will sell about 56 million tickets, officials said, and includes a $5,000 prize toward a new car. Even more tickets will be printed for the third game, officials said.

Senate Approves Bill To Limit Parties On Ballot

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A bill intended to limit the number of parties on the November general election ballot and avert the possible use of paper ballots is on its way to the House after Senate passage Wednesday.

The bill, approved 32-1, is designed to guard against more than nine parties qualifying for the general election ballot. Michigan voting machines, used by some 70 per cent of the voters, can only accommodate nine parties.

Election officials predict long lines, delays of days in determining winners and high error rates if paper ballots have to be used.

The bill also would alter the procedure by which minor parties qualify for the general election. Instead of obtaining petition signatures, the parties would have to demonstrate voter support in the August primary to advance to the general election ballot.

Under the bill, any party which obtains three tenths of one per cent of the primary vote — probably about 4,000 votes — would qualify for the general election.

Only the two major parties are guaranteed a spot on the November ballot on the basis of their performances in previous elections.

Two parties — the American Independent and the Human Rights — would be guaranteed a spot on the primary ballot on the basis of getting at least one per cent of the vote in the last general election. Other minor parties would have to obtain about 18,000 petition signatures to get their names on the August ballot.

Then, all but the two major parties would have to get three tenths of one per cent of the vote to get on the November ballot.

It would, however, be technically possible for more than nine parties to qualify for the November ballot, forcing a move to paper ballots.

The House, meanwhile, passed a bill designed to protect corporations from surprise stock takeovers. The bill, passed 102-1 and sent to the Senate, places restrictions on offers to acquire more than five per cent of stocks or shares of companies incorporated or based in Michigan.

The company wishing to purchase the stock would have to register its offer with the Department of Commerce and publicly disclose the terms of the offer. Either party involved could request a hearing before the takeover offer went into effect. Once the offer became effective, the owners of the company in question would have at least 30 days to accept it.

In other action, the House passed a bill returning about $2.5 million in unclaimed Michigan lottery prizes to the lottery prize account Oct. 1. The House approved the bill, 88-36, and sent it to the Senate.

The unclaimed money, which is now in the state's general fund, will not be put in the prize fund until October to let the state use it a while longer in a tight fiscal situation.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

THE UNITED STATES might not have been born, were it not for the unwitting help of King George III and his prime minister, Lord North. Not only was Parliament dogmatic and unyielding to the political ferment in the colonies, but King George and Lord North, by their insults, threats and refusals to accept peace overtures, alienated passive colonists. As a result, the mood of rebellion spread and hardened in the colonies. The World Almanac recalls.

Bloom'dale Next Step In Zoning Defeat

By LARRY MacINTYRE
Staff Writer

BLOOMINGDALE — Bloomingdale township Clerk Harold Burleson said yesterday the township board has not yet decided its next move in response to the defeat Monday by voters of a proposed township zoning ordinance.

The 178 to 36 vote against the ordinance, declared official Tuesday by the Van Buren board of canvassers, leaves the township with no local control over land use, Burleson said. Without the ordinance, builders need only comply with building codes and health regulations, he said.

The defeated ordinance would have set restrictions on land to be used for residential, commercial and agricultural purposes. Four amendments to the ordinance adopted by the board in February were also defeated in the balloting.

Those amendments would have allowed mobile homes anywhere in the township, restricted keeping of animal in residential areas to three dogs or cats and required a minimum lot size of two acres for all new residential lots.

An article reporting the election outcome which appeared in this newspaper Tuesday was captioned with a headline that may have been misleading, Burleson said. The headline read, "Mobile homes ordinance beaten in Bloomingdale."

Flint Club Makes Caring For Twins A Little Easier

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — The record for multiple births, according to the "Guinness Book of World Records," is held by Mme. Vassilet of Russia, who gave birth in 27 confinements to 16 pairs of twins, seven sets of triplets and four sets of quadruplets.

And while none of the mothers in the Greater Flint Area Mothers of Multiples (MOMS) club is faced with Mme. Vassilet's problems, they agree that having even one set of twins is something of a tussle.

"The first two years are hard work. There was never any free time to myself," said Fran Carter, president of the Flint MOMS. Her twins, Matthew and Melissa, are now 5.

When she brought the twins home from the hospital, her husband told her he would help, but that he wanted his sleep at night.

That didn't last long, said Mrs. Carter, who said the help of husbands and families is a necessity.

MOMS members meeting at Mrs. Carter's home agreed that the club has been a great help to them, also.

ings are a night out once a month when nights out are few and far between.

The group also offers reading materials and an opportunity for members to sell used twin clothing at rummage sale prices.

"In short, we want to reach out and help other mothers of twins," said Mrs. Carter. "Most of it is mental help."

Members of the club, which is affiliated with the Michigan Organization of Mothers of Twins, learn how to plan in advance and develop streamlined methods of handling household chores, trips to the doctor, shopping and other outings.

Club members also say they have learned to become ambidextrous in order to handle both children.

"My children are fed on demand," laughs Mrs. Estelle Holley, who has 14-month-old twins. "When they were four weeks old, I demanded my sleep."

Little research has been done on twins, MOMS says.

Benjamin Spock devotes only eight of the 589 pages in "Baby and Child Care" to twins.

According to Dr. Elizabeth

Seagull, professor of human development at Michigan State University, the University of Louisville Twin Study is the most comprehensive and includes a bibliography of the literature available.

Dr. Seagull recommends mothers of twins join a group like MOMS "to get ideas from mothers who have gone through the same things."

MOMS members say common sense told them twins should have some separate friends, separate time alone with parents and separate experiences. Experience has taught that twins should not get more attention than other siblings, but friends and strangers are usually drawn to twins, the women say.

Mrs. Carter recalls taking her three children to a shopping center one day. When the twins started to cry and she stopped to feed them, a crowd gathered around the twins.

Apparently, six-year-old Bradley, the non-twin, didn't like all the attention they were getting so he reached over and pulled the wig off his mother's head.

It helps to have a sense of humor, MOMS members agree.

Eau Claire Teachers Offer To Forego Raises

By AL AREND
Staff Writer

EAU CLAIRE — The Eau Claire Education association (ECEA) has made an informal offer to the Eau Claire school board to forego teacher pay raises for 1976-77 in an effort to save teaching positions.

The informal offer was presented to the board by Paul Bergan, ECEA group chairman, during a work session earlier this week at the high school, according to Dr. William Schaefer, III, superintendent.

Denton Kime, chief negotiator for the ECEA, said yesterday the informal offer was made on two conditions: That all other employees (administrators, cooks, mechanics, bus drivers) also agree to relinquish any pay hikes; and that "the pay freeze" last only one year. Three other unions represent the non-teaching employees of the school district.

Kime said the offer means teacher would not receive any kind of raise, including annual increment raises. The increment raises range from $105 to $350 and normally would be granted automatically for an additional year of service to each teacher reemployed.

It would also waive any additional pay boost which might have been negotiated for next year. The teachers are in the first year of a two-year contract with the district.

The district has 71 full-time teachers with a pupil-teacher ratio of 19.5 to one.

Teachers in the district now receive from $8,700 to $13,616, depending on years of service and degrees held.

Supt. Schaefer called the informal offer "very sincere and a generous one on their (teachers) part."

He said the offer would mean a savings of between $30,000 and $40,000 in teacher salaries alone, and estimated if all other employees go along with the idea, "perhaps a total of $60,000" could be saved.

The Eau Claire school board earlier this month instructed Supt. Schaefer to draft a proposal outlining personnel and program cuts for the 1976-77 school year involving $80,000 to $100,000. The move was to balance expected expenses against expected income.

The board will meet in special session Monday, March 22, to perhaps take final action on some budget trimming proposals and consider a possible request for additional millage.

As part of the master teaching contract, the ECEA has a provision that allows them an opportunity to participate in discussions, and offer possible alternatives.

Kime said he would expect any action on the informal offer to be made by the board within the next several weeks.

Kime said 55 out of 71 members of the fulltime teaching staff at Eau Claire are members of the ECEA. He said a majority of the ECEA membership had earlier indicated "via word of mouth" it would okay such an offer "for one year, if everybody else agreed."

Kime added "I'm sure the state education association would not agree with our (ECEA's) idea."

Supt. Schaefer said the board felt the teachers offer was sincere, but questioned whether the offer would have across-the-board support of all employees.

Pending clarification of how much state aid the district expects to receive next school year, Supt. Schaefer said the board anticipates putting all of its probationary teachers on notice that they may not be called back to work in the fall.

He said the system has 15 probationary teachers, of which at least five to six probably would not be rehired. He said such a move would mean five to six non-teaching employees also would not be rehired.

Based on our current projections, in order to maintain our present programs and staff, we're going to have to come up with an additional $80,000 to $100,000," Supt. Schaefer said. An additional two-mill property tax levy would help, he said. He also noted that six extra voted mills expire this year. "We'll definitely need to renew the six mills plus pass some additional if we are to maintain our present program levels," Supt. Schaefer said.

Supt. Schaefer said the board is aiming at a budget for next year at nearly the same level as this year's $1.6 million.

BANGOR TO PICK 5 FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Candidates In Monday Election Are Divided Over Action On Superintendent

By LARRY MacINTYRE

BANGOR — Four of the five independent candidates seeking election to the Bangor school board Monday, March 22, have indicated they would not immediately consider asking for the resignation of Supt. Howard Beyer.

The other independent, Phillip Wiles, said he believes Beyer took advantage of his $28,900-a-year position by allowing his wife and children to work for the school district and receive what one critic has charged was too much pay in some instances. "I wouldn't say I was a supporter of Beyer's," Wiles said.

The four candidates who said they would reserve judgment on Beyer until all the facts are known are Harold Johnson, Riley Lynch, Mrs. John (Darlene) Mock and William Stanislawski.

Five other candidates — running as a team — have not taken a public stand on Beyer, but two of them said the issue of his continued employment would be one of the first matters the next school board will have to consider.

Dr. Frederick Durham and Mrs. Charles (Mildred) Royal both said the next school board will immediately have to decide whether Beyer is fulfilling his duties and whether he is capable of continuing as superintendent.

This newspaper was unable to contact the other three team candidates, George Denny, Harold Wright and Mrs. Leland (Clara) Singer. All the team candidates were chosen by the citizens group which spearheaded last month's recall of five board members who supported Beyer in the face of demands that he be ousted.

The uncompleted terms of those board members will be filled in Monday's election.

"Obviously he's alienated a great many voters," Dr. Durham said of Beyer. "I can't make a judgment on the little facts I've seen so far, but if he can't do the job, the answer is to get rid of him."

Mrs. Royal said she was opposed to paying off the remaining two years of Beyer's contract which expires in June, 1978, as an easy way to replace him.

Fired Police Chief Asks Reinstatement

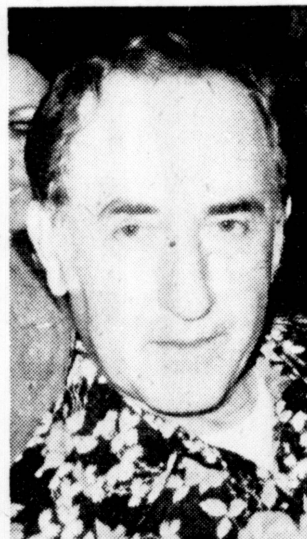

LAWRENCE — Roscoe Earls, recently fired Lawrence police chief, said he is petitioning to have the Lawrence village council reconsider its decision and reinstate him as police chief. Earls, 54, police chief for 11 years, said petitions are already being circulated in the village on his behalf and he predicted an "overwhelming majority of registered voters" would sign his petitions. He said the village has slightly over 200 registered voters.

Earls said he made the decision to seek his job back after "many people in the community" urged him to do so.

Earls was dismissed by the council in early March from his duties. Announcement of the firing cited only reasons of lack of interest and motivation on Earls part.

Earls said he plans to present the petitions to the village council at their next regular meeting in April.

She stressed that the recall committee, which has changed its name to the Bangor School Unity committee, has not held the Unity candidates to any platform, and particularly in regard to Beyer.

"Except for Wiles, the independent candidates took a much softer stance on Beyer, and some were openly critical of those responsible for last month's recall election."

Stanislawski said that if he were elected, the earliest he would even want to consider asking for Beyer's resignation would be late next fall as Beyer's expertise will be needed to help the novice school board negotiate a three-year contract with the teachers' union.

Stanislawski and three other independents all said they would wait until the results of a state treasury department audit of school finances are known before passing judgment on Beyer.

The audit was ordered in January by the state school superintendent, Dr. John Porter, after a preliminary review was completed by his department. That review looked into the validity of 17 allegations issued by school critic Paul French Jr. charging Beyer with nepotism and the administration and board with mishandling school funds.

"This complete state audit may prove some of these things aren't true, then what?" asked Lynch, who said he had voted against recalling the five ousted school board members. He said there should not have been a recall election until the full facts were known.

"We don't know definitely if those charges are the truth or if they were just a hoax to get them (the ousted board members) out of there," Lynch added.

"I want absolute evidence. The audit has to be in before we make a decision on Beyer," Mrs. Mock said.

Johnson said he remained neutral on Beyer. "They're going to have to show me something in black and white before I would fire the guy," he said.

Stanislawski said he didn't think the charges were too serious.

"I don't think overpaying his wife or son is grounds for termination, alone," Stanislawski said.

He said it was the board's responsibility to correct that sort of thing, and if it could not be corrected, then it would be grounds for asking for the superintendent's resignation.

"I don't think there's any error he (Beyer) has made that can't be corrected," Stanislawski said.

Stanislawski said there never would have been a recall election if the ousted board members had explained their side of the case to the public.

"Unfortunately, Howard's not the type of person who takes his case to the press," he said.

Johnson was also critical of the recall.

"The recall hurt our community," he said. "It got us a lot of bad publicity and ruined some good people. I knew a lot of those people and I knew they were doing their best."

SJ School Board To Have Special Budget Meeting

A special meeting of the St. Joseph board of education will be held Monday at 7 p.m. for the primary purpose of adopting a preliminary budget for the 1976-77 school year, according to Ray M. According to Dumke, the preliminary budget will then be sent to the Berrien county tax allocation board.

Van Buren's Clerk To Seek Re-Election

PAW PAW — Charles E. MacDonald, 61, announced today he would seek re-election as Van Buren county clerk. MacDonald, a Republican, was appointed to the post July 12, 1971 to fill out the unexpired term of the late Thomas C. Kiefer, and won election to a four-year term in 1972.

A native of Mishawaka, Ind., MacDonald served as Antwerp township clerk for 26 years and Lawton village clerk for seven years prior to his appointment.

He is a high school graduate and has completed a governmental accounting program offered through Michigan State university. MacDonald is a former member of the executive board of the Municipal Clerks Association of Michigan and also served on the Lawton village planning committee and elections commission of the Municipal League of Michigan.

Eau Claire Teachers Offer To Forego Raises

By AL AREND
Staff Writer

EAU CLAIRE — The Eau Claire Education association (ECEA) has made an informal offer to the Eau Claire school board to forego teacher pay raises for 1976-77 in an effort to save teaching positions.

The informal offer was presented to the board by Paul Bergan, ECEA group chairman, during a work session earlier this week at the high school, according to Dr. William Schaefer, III, superintendent.

Denton Kime, chief negotiator for the ECEA, said yesterday the informal offer was made on two conditions: That all other employees (administrators, cooks, mechanics, bus drivers) also agree to relinquish any pay hikes; and that "the pay freeze" last only one year. Three other unions represent the non-teaching employees of the school district.

Kime said the offer means teacher would not receive any kind of raise, including annual increment raises. The increment raises range from $105 to $350 and normally would be granted automatically for an additional year of service to each teacher reemployed.

It would also waive any additional pay boost which might have been negotiated for next year. The teachers are in the first year of a two-year contract with the district.

The district has 71 full-time teachers with a pupil-teacher ratio of 19.5 to one.

Teachers in the district now receive from $8,700 to $13,516, depending on years of service and degrees held.

Supt. Schaefer called the informal offer "very sincere and a generous one on their (teachers) part."

Michigan Bell Says Earnings At 17-Year Low

DETROIT — Michigan Bell emerged from 1975 with its rate of earnings at a 17-year low, the high quality of its service in jeopardy and the specter of layoffs looming over its operations, the company claims.

In the annual report issued today, Michigan Bell President David K. Easlick traced the utility's worsening financial condition to "the key factor" over which it has no control — the prices charged for its services.

"By all objective standards," he said, "telephone rates in Michigan are too low to support the high level of service we provide our customers."

The company, Easlick stressed, took many steps to pull itself up financially through its own efforts during the year.

He cited Michigan Bell's intensified controls on expenses "which already were tight," the introduction of new products and services and an all-employee sales campaign which produced revenues far beyond goals.

"The most rewarding aspect of 1975," he said in commending employees, "was the strong performance of telephone people who did more with less than anyone could expect."

But these efforts, he said, were "frustrated" by the Michigan Public Service Commission's refusal to authorize rates high enough to produce the earnings level set by the commission itself.

As a result, the company's return on intrastate net plant — the measurement used to gauge the financial performance of telephone companies as well as other utilities — dropped to 6.35 per cent, Easlick said.

This was Michigan Bell's lowest such return since 1958, and failed by $90 million to yield the 8.36 per cent deemed by the commission as fair and reasonable," according to Easlick.

In the face of the company's financial troubles, Easlick said, it "seems paradoxical" that total net income rose 9.9 per cent to $103 million.

"Unfortunately," he said, "income failed to keep pace with net plant investment, which grew 11.2 per cent to $2.75 billion as a result of Michigan Bell's large construction program."

"We fall behind, as we did again last year, when the growth in net income is less than the increase in investment," he said.

Viewed out of context, Easlick said, the net income increase could "create the illusion" of financial vitality.

"But to measure our financial performance in perspective, it is necessary to match the year's growth in income against the growth in investment," he said.

"Each year we must add substantially to our investment in plant capacity to handle the increase in customers and calling — which in turn generates more revenues, more expenses and more income."

Last year's income, he said, failed for the second year in a row to cover the company's $1.40 dividend or to halt the decline in earnings per share which slipped two cents to $1.31.

As the state's fourth-largest private employer with a work force of nearly 30,000, Easlick noted, Michigan Bell is a vital factor in Michigan's economy — both in jobs and public service.

"If we are to improve service — if we are even to avoid its deterioration — we must have a work force large enough to provide it and earnings that pay for it," he said.

"Good management alone can't do the job," he said. "It will take realistic regulation, too."

Decision In Suit Vs. Paul French Upheld On Appeal

By DENNIS COGSWELL
Paw Paw Bureau.

LANSING — A circuit court decision in a civil lawsuit involving Paul C. French, a key figure in the Bangor school district recall election last month, has been upheld by the appeals court here.

The decision said no one involved in the case was entitled to damages.

The suit involved a swine rearing operation in Waverly and Bloomingdale townships in Van Buren county.

H. D. Schrier of Kalamazoo, owner, had sued French for damages on grounds French's mismanagement of the three farms involved had cost him thousands of dollars.

French in a counter suit sought damages on grounds the termination of his contract as manager had cost him earnings.

The court ruled that neither side had proved grounds for damages. The suit was filed in 1972 in Van Buren circuit court but was transferred to St. Joseph county circuit court when Van Buren Judge David Anderson Jr. disqualified himself from hearing the case.

Judge Robert Boyle of the St. Joseph court handed down the initial decision in 1974.

In the suit, the farm owner claimed he had entered into a contract with French in 1969 to manage the farms. The contract was terminated in early 1970, according to the suit.

Named as co-defendant with French was his wife, Betty, while Frances L. Jensen subsequently became the plaintiff as administrator of Schrier's estate.

According to the decision, the owner had no grounds for damages in part because he was at least partially responsible for his own losses. The responsibility, according to the court, stemmed from the owner's failure to act when he knew some action should be taken.

At one point, the opinion noted, Schrier had given French $15,000 even when he (Schrier) knew he was planning to sue French.

At the same time, the court opinion held French was not entitled to damages through his counter suit because to a "great measure" his loss of earnings stemmed from his mismanagement of the operation.

The court also said that French's claim to Schrier that he had "extensive" knowledge about swine operations was not upheld by the outcome of the venture.

French in October, 1975, unleashed a series of 17 allegations against the Bangor school board over financial operations by the administration and the board. The allegations, in part, led to a state audit of the district and the recall of five of the seven board members.

Three Are Injured In Two-Car Crash

A young man was hospitalized and two others were treated for injuries sustained as the result of a two-car collision Wednesday on Kerlikowske road north of Red Arrow highway, Benton township police said.

Reported in "fairly good" condition today at Mercy hospital, Benton Harbor, was William Keith Gettig, 18, route 4, box 84, Territorial road, rural Benton Harbor. He was identified as the driver of one of the cars. His injuries included a fractured leg and facial cuts.

A passenger in Gettig's auto,

Bill Lacer, 17, of 2706 Kerlikowske, was treated and released from Mercy. Driver of the other car, Robert Jeffery Weybright, 16, of 326 Timber drive, Coloma, was treated and released from Watervliet Community hospital.

Police said Weybright was ticketed for driving left of center in the 10:25 p.m. accident. A fire in the engine compartment of the Weybright auto was extinguished by township officer Steve Hansen with a portable fire extinguisher, police said.

Suit Claims Child Ate Ant Poison

An Indianapolis couple has filed suit in Berrien Circuit court against a Benton Harbor firm and a New Buffalo couple, claiming their 11-month-old daughter ate some ant poison while in the New Buffalo home.

The plaintiffs, Daniel and Marcia Oney, seek $53,425 on behalf of their daughter, Natalie. Named defendants were FATSCO, of Benton Harbor, which manufactures an arsenic-based ant poison, the suit claims, and Frank and Bessie Vorel, of New Buffalo.

The Oneys contend they were guests at the Vorel residence on June 26, 1973, and while there their daughter put pieces of cotton saturated with the FATSCO ant poison, which were on the floor, in her mouth.

The suit claims the girl sustained potential liver damage, and contends the Vorels and the manufacturer were negligent in not warning of the potential danger.

Michigan Bell Says Earnings At 17-Year Low

DETROIT — Michigan Bell emerged from 1975 with its rate of earnings at a 17-year low, the high quality of its service in jeopardy and the specter of layoffs looming over its operations, the company claims.

In the annual report issued today, Michigan Bell President David K. Eastlick traced the utility's worsening financial condition to "the key factor" over which it has no control — the prices charged for its services.

"By all objective standards," he said, "telephone rates in Michigan are too low to support the high level of service we provide our customers."

The company, Eastlick stressed, took many steps to pull itself up financially through its own efforts during the year.

He cited Michigan Bell's intensified controls on expenses "which already were tight," the introduction of new products and services and an all-employee sales campaign which produced revenues far beyond goals.

"The most rewarding aspect of 1975," he said in commending employees, "was the strong performance of telephone people who did more with less than anyone could expect."

But these efforts, he said, were "frustrated" by the Michigan Public Service Commission's refusal to authorize rates high enough to produce the earnings level set by the commission itself.

As a result, the company's return on intrastate net plant — the measurement used to gauge the financial performance of telephone companies as well as other utilities — dropped to 6.35 per cent, Eastlick said.

This was Michigan Bell's lowest such return since 1958, and failed by $90 million to yield the 8.36 per cent deemed by the commission as "fair and reasonable," according to Eastlick.

In the face of the company's financial troubles, Eastlick said, it "seems paradoxical" that total net income rose 9.9 per cent to $103 million.

"Unfortunately," he said, "income failed to keep pace with net plant investment, which grew 11.2 per cent to $2.75 billion as a result of Michigan Bell's large construction program."

"We fall behind, as we did again last year, when the growth in net income is less than the increase in investment," he said.

Viewed out of context, Eastlick said, the net income increase could "create the illusion" of financial vitality.

"But to measure our financial performance in perspective, it is necessary to match the year's growth in income against the growth in investment," he said.

"Each year we must add substantially to our investment in plant capacity to handle the increase in customers and calling — which in turn generates more revenues, more expenses and more income."

Last year's income, he said, failed for the second year in a row to cover the company's $1.40 dividend or to halt the decline in earnings per share which slipped two cents to $1.31.

As the state's fourth-largest private employer with a work force of nearly 30,000, Eastlick noted, Michigan Bell is a vital factor in Michigan's economy — both in jobs and public service.

"If we are to improve service — if we are even to avoid its deterioration — we must have a work force large enough to provide it and earnings that pay for it," he said.

"Good management alone can't do the job," he said. "It will take realistic regulation, too."

Decision In Suit Vs. Paul French Upheld On Appeal

By DENNIS COGSWELL
Paw Paw Bureau

LANSING — A circuit court decision in a civil lawsuit involving Paul C. French, a key figure in the Bangor school district recall election last month, has been upheld by the appeals court here.

The decision said no one involved in the case was entitled to damages.

The suit involved a swine rearing operation in Waverly and Bloomingdale townships in Van Buren county.

H. D. Schrier of Kalamazoo, owner, had sued French for damages on grounds French's mismanagement of the three farms involved had cost him thousands of dollars.

French in a counter suit sought damages on grounds the termination of his contract as manager had cost him earnings.

The court ruled that neither side had proved grounds for damages. The suit was filed in 1972 in Van Buren circuit court but was transferred to St. Joseph county circuit court when Van Buren Judge David Anderson Jr. disqualified himself from hearing the case. Judge Robert Boyle of the St. Joseph court handed down the initial decision in 1974.

In the suit, the farm owner claimed he had entered into a contract with French in 1968 to manage the farms. The contract was terminated in early 1970, according to the suit.

Named as co-defendant with French was his wife, Betty, while Frances L. Jensen subsequently became the plaintiff as administrator of Schrier's estate.

According to the decision, the owner had no grounds for damages in part because he was at least partially responsible for his own losses. The responsibility, according to the court, stemmed from the owner's failure to act when he knew some action should be taken.

At one point, the opinion noted, Schrier had given French $15,000 even when he (Schrier) knew he was planning to sue French.

At the same time, the court opinion held French was not entitled to damages through his counter suit because to a "great measure" his loss of earnings stemmed from his mismanagement of the operation.

The court also said that French's claim to Schrier that he had "extensive" knowledge about swine operations was not upheld by the outcome of the venture.

French in October, 1975, unleashed a series of 17 allegations against the Bangor school board over financial operations by the administration and the board. The allegations, in part, led in a state audit of the district and the recall of five of the seven board members.

Three Are Injured In Two-Car Crash

A young man was hospitalized and two others were treated for injuries sustained as the result of a two-car collision Wednesday on Kerlikowske road north of Red Arrow highway, Benton township police said.

Reported in "fairly good" condition today at Mercy hospital, Benton Harbor, was William Keith Gettig, 18, route 4, box 84, Territorial road, rural Benton Harbor. He was identified as the driver of one of the cars. His injuries included a fractured leg and facial cuts.

A passenger in Gettig's auto,

Bill Lacer, 17, of 2706 Kerlikowske, was treated and released from Mercy. Driver of the other car, Robert Jeffery Weybright, 16, of 328 Timber drive, Coloma, was treated and released from Watervliet Community hospital.

Suit Claims Child Ate Ant Poison

An Indianapolis couple has filed suit in Berrien Circuit court against a Benton Harbor firm and a New Buffalo couple, claiming their 11-month-old daughter ate some ant poison while in the New Buffalo home.

The plaintiffs, Daniel and Marcia Oney, seek $53,425 on behalf of their daughter, Natalie. Named defendants were FATSICO, of Benton Harbor, which manufactures an arsenic-based ant poison, the suit claims, and Frank and Bessie Vorel, of New Buffalo.

The Oneys contend they were guests at the Vorel residence on June 28, 1973, and while there their daughter put pieces of cotton saturated with the FATSICO ant poison, which were on the floor, in her mouth.

The suit claims the girl sustained potential liver damage, and contends the Vorels and the manufacturer were negligent in not warning of the potential danger.

Market Heads Lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, with spirits apparently dampened by fears of higher interest rates and monetary discord in Europe.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off by nearly two points. Losers took a 4-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock exchange-listed issues.

Today's early prices included Chrysler, up 1/8 at 19 1/2; Polaroid, down 1/8 at 39, and Gulf Oil, unchanged at 23.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average advanced 2.52 to 985.99 as two stronger rally bids failed early in the session.

NYSE-listed stocks gaining in price held a slim lead over losers and volume on the Big Board rose somewhat to 26.19 million shares.

Two Named To Cherry Committee

LANSING — Gov. William G. Milliken has named two fruit growers to the nine-man Michigan Cherry Committee, which controls the collection and use of advertising and promotion taxes levied on sweet and tart cherry production.

William J. Schaub, of Lake Leelanau, was appointed to the committee. He is past president of the Leelanau Horticultural Society. Re-appointed to the committee was J. Mitchell Paradis, of Kewadin. Both were named to three-year terms.

Nude Photo In Gay Magazine; Fireman Sues

MIAMI (AP) — Bill Cashman, a fireman, says he didn't mind posing nude for a centerfold in a magazine for women who like men. But he's got a $2-million objection to use of the picture by a magazine for men who like men.

Cashman, 26, said Wednesday he decided to pose nude for Playgirl magazine "as a grin. I figured, what the hell, if they wanted to use me, I'd do it."

But he said when one of the pictures showed up in a promotional brochure for Blueboy, the fun began to wear off.

South Haven Hospital

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Make A Start With Quality Corporations

Q. I've just recently become interested in the stock market but can't understand those headings on the stock tables: "P.E. (hds), close, net change." What stocks would you recommend for the novice investors?

A. P-E means price-earnings ratio. A company's stock selling at $40 which has had 12-month earnings of $5 per share is said to be selling at a price-earnings ratio of 8 (40 divided by 5). "Hds" refers to sales of the stock on the day in question, generally expressed with "00" omitted. Thus, the number 14 in this column means 1400 shares were traded. "Close" is the price at which the last transaction of the day took place. It may represent a trade at 11 a.m., or 2 p.m., or 3:59 1/2 p.m. The net change represents the change in the last price from the last price of the preceding day.

The N.Y. Stock Exchange, Dept. S.U. Box 252, Wall Street Station, New York City 10005 has an "investors information kit," for $2, which will clear up many of these fundamental queries.

Novices — if they buy any stock at all — should buy issues of long-established, successful corporations. Time enough to take chances if and when they get to the point they can evaluate the risk.

Q. How can we make a claim for E bonds that were lost and how can we change the name of a co-owner on a bond?

A. You should obtain the necessary forms from your nearest Federal Reserve Bank or branch, or address your request for forms to the Bureau of the Public Debt, 200 Third St., Parkersburg, W. Va. 26101. Form PD 1048 is used to request replacement of bonds that have been lost, stolen or destroyed; PD 1934, for replacement of bonds mutilated or partly destroyed; PD 1938, to change a co-owner on a bond when both co-owners are living; PD 3360, to remove an owner's name from a bond in favor of a relative; PD 4000, a multi-purpose form — to add beneficiary or co-owner, delete a beneficiary, show a name change or correction.

Q. Is it O.K. with you if the stamped return envelope I include is addressed to me only by post office box number?

A. It's perfect.
Q. I have some certificates of deposit maturing soon and am wondering whether I should transfer the money to some of the new "money" funds. Would they pay me 7 1/2 per cent? I am 73 and could use more income.

A. These money funds invest most of their funds in Treasury paper, in bank certificates of deposit, bankers' acceptances and other short-term obligations. As a result, their payout varies directly with the trend of short-term money rates. As of this writing, these are well below last year's levels, so you must expect lower income. Before you go into such a fund, ask what was paid out in recent months, and what is being paid out now.

Q. A recent letter to stockholders of a bank said the dividend was being reduced but that shareholders' equity would thus be improved. Of what benefit is this to shareholders?

A. Whatever money isn't paid out remains with the company, thus increasing the assets, your position is improved — whether you like it or not.

MR. SHULSKY welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Ads Told Story, Won An Award

The American Society of Agricultural Engineers has received an honorable mention award for a management technique it illustrated at an Idea Fair staged by the American Society of Association Executives in Washington, D.C., early this month.

The agricultural engineering organization, headquartered at 2950 Niles road, St. Joseph, presented a display of a program it employed to prepare its membership for a sizeable dues increase.

In brief, the program involved a series of advertisements placed in the association's magazine in advance of the dues increase, outlining how the various functions of the association benefited members.

Roger R. Castenson, assistant secretary for membership activities, said the technique resulted in only a very small decrease in membership renewals.

Purpose of the Idea Fair was to expose successful techniques for other members of the American Society of Association Executives. This association is comprised of some 500 persons who manage the nation's voluntary membership associations and societies. It is sometimes called "the association of associations."

House Passes Stock Bill

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Legislation designed to protect corporations from surprise stock take-overs is headed for the Senate. The House passed the bill Wednesday, 102-1. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Thaddeus Stupczynski, D-Detroit, places restrictions on offers to acquire more than five per cent of stocks or shares of companies incorporated or based in Michigan. The company wishing to purchase the stock would have to register its offer with the Department of Commerce and publicly disclose the terms of the offer.

House Near Seafarer Vote

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Legislation permitting a referendum on Project Seafarer could come up for a final House vote Thursday. The House Wednesday moved the two-bill package into final vote position with no major debate. The bills were introduced by Rep. Dominic Jacobetti, D-Negaunee. As they now stand, if the U.S. Navy indicates its intent to use either Michigan peninsula as a site for the controversial underground communications system, the counties in the peninsula involved could hold a referendum May 18 during the presidential primary.

Macomb Considers Pull-Out

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — Macomb County might withdraw from the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) if a tri-county tax for mass transit is approved in the legislature, says the chairman of the Macomb County board of commissioners.

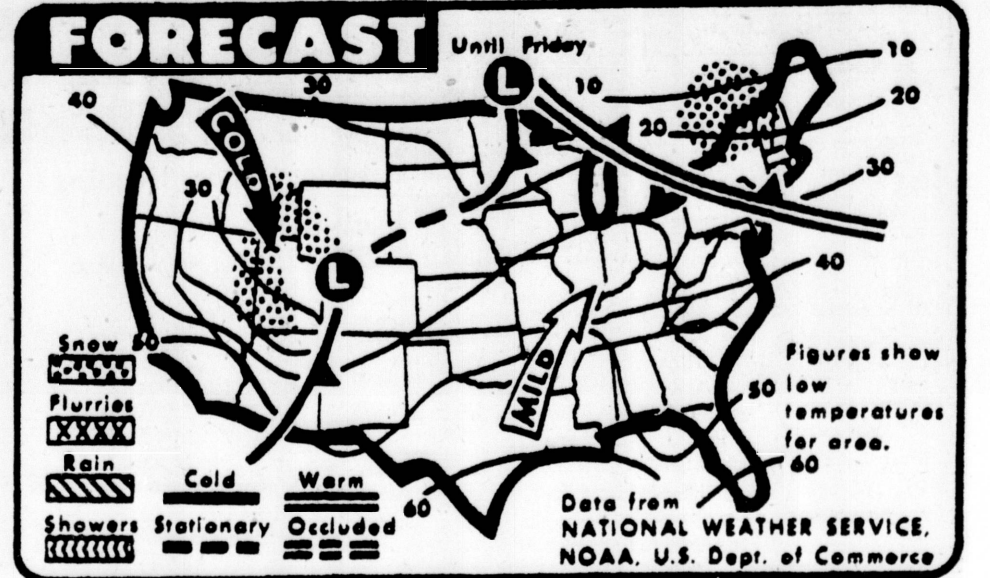

"Withdrawal is one alternative we have," Robert Verkuilen, chairman of the Macomb County board said Wednesday. "Our civil counsel is looking into the legal ramifications."

Verkuilen said the county board objects to a proposed tri-county tax to help Detroit's mass transportation system.

"The tax should be statewide," said Verkuilen. SEMTA officials say withdrawal by Macomb would be a severe blow to the organization's mass transit plans.

A SEMTA tri-county tax bill has been sidetracked for several months in the Senate Taxation Committee. A substitute bill was introduced earlier this week and referred to another committee. It calls for a 10-fold increase in the property transfer tax in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Sellers of real property in those counties now paying 55 cents per $500 of sales value would pay $5.50 per $500. Purpose of the tax is to raise $25 million in local matching money for SEMTA's new bus and rail transit program.

TODAY'S WEATHER MAP: Snow flurries are forecast Thursday for the western Plains and western New England. Sunny skies are expected for most of the country. Mild weather is forecast for the Mississippi Valley and south Atlantic coast. Cold weather is forecast for most of the West. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Few Wage-Earners Taking Advantage Of Tax Shelter

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — An inequity of the federal income tax system that denied many wage-earners a tax shelter for their retirement funds has been at least partially corrected, but many eligible workers have failed to respond to the change.

Beginning last year, wage-earners not covered by a qualified private or government retirement plan — excluding Social Security and Railroad Retirement — became eligible to establish their own Individual Retirement Accounts.

Those who do so are allowed

Earnings By McCord Set Record

DETROIT (AP) — McCord Corp. on Wednesday reported record earnings of $1.9 million for the quarter ended Feb. 29, nearly six times the profits reported for the same year-earlier quarter.

The automotive supplier said earnings in the period, equal to 95 cents a share, compared with profits of $319,000, or 16 cents a share, a year ago, when operations were hurt by a depression in the auto industry.

Sales for the three months, the second quarter of McCord's fiscal 1976 year, rose 19 per cent to $35.5 million. Sales a year ago were $29.8 million.

For the first six months of the fiscal year, McCord reported profits of $4.1 million, or $2.07 a share, compared with $2.1 million, or $1.08 a share, a year ago.

Sales of $71.4 million were up from $68.9 million for the first half of fiscal 1975.

—What features should I look for?
The institution handling your account should be able to explain the terms of your IRA and give you an indication of the expected rate of return. You may ask if the account will have a guaranteed termination value.

The institution should agree to furnish periodic statements on the status and value of your account. Some IRAs have high front-end charges and frequent transaction costs, and some will have negligible or even no fees.

You should ask if you can vary the amount of your contribution from year to year. You may be required to decide immediately what type of retirement payments you want, or you may be able to postpone that decision until retirement.

Next: Specific tax breaks and payments you may expect from an IRA.

NEWS OF MARKETS

Market Heads
Lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, with spirits apparently dampened by fears of higher interest rates and monetary discord in Europe.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off by nearly two points. Losers took a 4-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock exchange-listed issues.

Today's early prices included Chrysler, up 1/8 at 19 1/2; Polaroid, down 1/4 at 39; and Gulf Oil, unchanged at 22.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average advanced 2.52 to 865.88 as two stronger rally bids failed early in the session.

NYSE-listed stocks gaining in price held a slim lead over losers and volume on the Big Board rose somewhat to 26.19 million shares.

The NYSE's composite stock index was up 0.01 at 53.91, while the American Exchange's market value index gained 0.20 to 108.82.

council urges you to look into the possibility of alleviating the flooding situation of downtown Sawyer, Feb. 21, and again on March 5. Every time this happens our church basement floods. We have spent considerable money and effort to waterproof the basement walls and floor, to no avail. In spite of this, when rain water overflows both the highway drain in front of the church and the county drain which crosses our south boundary line, basement flooding follows.

"We realize that this has been a long standing problem with which you are familiar. Eventually something will have to be done about it and we therefore urge your most careful consideration of corrective measures in the not too distant future."

SHE'D LIKE PUZZLE PRINTED LARGER

Editor,
I am writing to you in regards to the size of the printing in the crossword puzzle. They are so small and dim I can not read some without a magnifying glass and I do enjoy doing the puzzles.

I am sure there are others who have the same trouble. Why can't the letters be the size of the other articles?

Mrs. Florence Seely
9880 Silver Lake road
Grand Junction

EDITOR'S NOTE: Finding enough space to print all the news and entertainment features is a never-ending struggle. Ordinarily, the crossword puzzle is large enough to be worked by most readers. Some days, the crossword page doesn't print as well as other days. And that does create a problem. Sorry.

CLAIMS BH SCHOOLS DEFY MAJORITY

Editor,
It seems our elected officials will not accept a mandate from the voters that is not in agreement with their decisions. Voters in the Benton Harbor Area School District turned down a request for additional millage by a good margin. The first statement from school officials was that a NO from the voters is not acceptable. The demand will be made again and again until we become tired of going to the polls to vote. Despite the fact that the message has been delivered time after time.

The once outstanding school system is now the most undesirable, a fact any realtor can confirm with hard facts and those who have had to sell homes at a loss because of our school district.

Voters just will not put any more money into a system they are unable to change. A few people have gone to extreme legal maneuvers to make certain that the voters are not allowed to vote for any kind of change in the system, because it is not acceptable to them in their frame of mind despite what the majority of voters might like to see, and react pompous and arrogant when challenged in that regard.

It appears that the voters will never be allowed to change a deteriorating condition. But they can continue to voice their dissatisfaction by saying no to the only alternative they are allowed to vote on.

If someday the public again has a responsive system, they too will respond with support. Never before has the Benton Harbor Area Schools had more money to spend, over $16,000,000 this year, never have they had a finer administration building, never a finer Service Center. These are the finest in the entire area but at the same time never have we had a lower academic level in reading and writing and never have our classrooms been in poorer condition. Oh, I almost forgot the free recreation center we will have second to none in the area that the system decided we had no right to vote on if we were willing to pay to operate.

CQ Congress Votes

BY CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

WASHINGTON - Votes of area members of Congress on key roll calls for the week ending March 12 were:

SENATE

Building Energy Standards - By a 52-35 vote, the Senate approved a bill that would require state and local governments to rewrite their building codes to comply with federal energy standards for new homes and commercial buildings. If any area failed to comply with the standards its new homes would be ineligible for federal mortgage assistance and its federally regulated banks and institutions could make no loans for new construction.

The bill would also provide $55-million annually for federal grants to help low-income persons insulate their homes.

Supporters of the bill agree with the administration's call for measures to cut energy use in new buildings as part of the nation's energy independence effort. The threat of cutting off mortgage loans was necessary, they added, to put teeth into the federal standards.

Opponents, although agreeing with the need for energy savings in new construction, challenged the mandatory penalties as an unwarranted federal intrusion into state and local affairs.

Such decisions made at the state and local government level could better take account of climate and construction

Auscos Productivity Study Has Connection In California Plan

A productivity study made for a St. Joseph manufacturer by a Connecticut firm played a part in the board of supervisors in Calaveras County, Calif., recently contracting for a study of the county government's efficiency.

A story in the Feb. 4 edition of the Calaveras Enterprise newspaper reported that the county board had engaged Integrated Control Systems of Litchfield, Conn., to study the county's labor efficiency.

One of the board's members, elected not too long ago, is John Tiscornia, a nephew of Lester Tiscornia, president of Auto Specialties Manufacturing Co., St. Joseph.

The Auscos president said here the Integrated Control Systems firm had done a productivity study for the company and "did a great job for us at Auscos". He said he had told his nephew of the Ausco study, and the nephew, in turn, took the idea to the Calaveras board.

According to the Calaveras Enterprise story, the study firm has estimated that the county could achieve savings in the range of $360,000 a year with productivity improvements the firm can recommend to the county.

Township Residents Take Picks, Shovels Into Their Own Hands

FRUITPORT, Mich. (AP) — Citizens tired of wallowing in muddy Cloverville Road in Fruitport Township have taken up the shovel while they fight Muskegon County road officials. Residents of Cloverville Road took it upon themselves to repair the bog at the intersection of Cloverville Road and Cline. The county road commission, however, told them to halt their work.

While a bureaucratic battle over fixing the road droned on, the residents spent two days on repairs, using shovels, tractors, dump trucks, a front-end loader and even a crane. The work included cutting a 50-yard ditch to drain the intersection, filling it with sand from a farm and grading.

Residents now report they can pass the intersection without four-wheel drive vehicles for the first time in weeks.

"I thought vigilante groups went out a long time ago," said Robert Dobyns, assistant superintendent for the road commission, after he learned of the residents' road repairs.

"If they are doing something in the right of way out there, it's against the law," Dobyns huffed. "You can't do work without a permit from the road commission."

Dobyns also said road work requires the contractor be insured and bonded. "I hope those people also realize that they are liable if they cause an accident out there," Dobyns concluded. "We're going to try and get the permit," reported cattlemen Bert Grega, who gathered about 20 friends and neighbors for the project Sunday and Monday.
